ACCUSED MAN NOT LINKED IN CRIME, CLAIM

Defense Counsel Plans to Ask Court for Verdict.

BALLISTICS EXPERTS WILL CLASH IN TEST

U. S. Challenge as to Goddard's Ability Is Accepted.

JURORS TO WITNESS BULLET EXPERIMENTS

Charles Henry Smith, chief counsel for Herbert M. Campbell, on trial for the murder of Mary Baker, announced yesterday that since the testimony of Government's witnesses is virtually closed, he will ask the court for a directed verdict of acquittal. He will base his request on his contention that the Government has not proven venue in the case, and that there has been no evidence shown to link Campbell with the crime.

A challenge by the Government to have Col. Calvin Goddard demonstrate to a jury that ballistics is an exact science was accepted yesterday by Mr. Smith.

As a result of the challenge the case of United States versus Campbell has resolved itself into a trial of ballistics as an exact science versus ballistics as a theory.

This surprise move by the Government established a precedent in the history of jurisprudence in that the challenge was accepted by the defense.

Novel Demonstration Looms.

Opposing lawyers today will arrange the novel demonstrations which will mark the first time that Col. Goddard and Dr. Albert H. Hamilton, defense expert, will clash. In addition it will be the first time that two separate schools of ballistics will meet in a move that is intended to uphold or demolish ballistics as an accepted science.

Col. Goddard took the stand and testified that Campbell's pistol is the gun that killed the girl. Toward the close of his examination Mr. Collins said:

"Is there any doubt as to the identity of this gun?"

"No doubt at all," said Col. Goddard.

Challenge Is Accepted.

"Are you willing to fire bullets from any given number of guns in the presence of this jury, then take the bullets and tell which gun they came from, and which bullets came from the same gun?"

"Yes," he said emphatically.

Without any hesitation Mr. Smith aros and said: "The defense accepts the challenge."

Whether the tests will be made in the courtroom was undetermined last night, but Justice Jesse C. Adkins, the presiding judge, has indicated that they will be held outside the court.

Adjournment Till Monday.

In all probability the tests will be made in the Bureau of Standards, where there is the necessary apparatus. The jury will be present during the tests, if Mr. Collins' plans are carried through.

After the agreement had been made Judge Adkins adjourned court until Monday morning.

Mr. Collins introduced in evidence, over objections of the defense, a series of microphotographs in which were shown scratches on the test and death bullets, made by rough edges on the interior of the barrel.

Goddard Explains Scratches.

Over the pictures of the highly magnified mortal bullets segments of pictures of the test bullet were imposed and Col Goddard explained to the jury that scratches on pictures of the fatal slugs coincided with scratches on bullets fired from Campbell's pistol.

These pictures were distributed among the jurors and Col Goddard mingled among them explaining questions asked. Introduction of these pictures was opposed by Lucian Vandoren of defense counsel on the claim that there was no manner of showing the manner of taking the pictures.

"The MAN in the GREEN HAT"

By GEORGE L. CASSIDAY ("The Man in the Green Hat.")

I had worked on Capitol Hill only a few months until I began to see that the possibilities of extending the business were only limited by the number of people I met, broadly speaking.

The big problem that I had to deal with was the making of deliveries. As one congressman introduced me to another, there was no difficulty in getting customers who gave regular orders, but filling these orders was another matter.

Customers were curious about my methods and many of them would discuss with me possible improvements in the delivery system. One day a congressman from a Middle West State said to me:

"George, did it ever occur to you it would be easier to bring supplies into the building in larger lots and distribute it from a base of operations from the inside?"

It was then I began storing and cutting liquor for the use of members of Congress in the House Office Building itself.

There is a force of about 50 policemen on guard about the Capitol and the House and Senate Office Buildings, with a night shift. These men wear badges and uniforms like the ordinary policemen and carry the same equipment. All of the entrances to these buildings are guarded by two men. Every member of the Capitol police force has the same power of arrest as the city police in Washington. The problem at all times during my ten years on Capitol Hill was to get by these doormen without being molested.

I had one advantage in making deliveries which the average person does not know about. The Capitol police have enforced a rule for years that any person leaving one of the buildings with a large package, box or bundle must show what it contains. This is to prevent intruders or employes from taking office supplies, typewriters or other Government property out of the buildings. This rule is never enforced when a senator or representative leaves his office. I have had good customers point out to me a passage in the Constitution that they claimed gave them immunity from arrest while going to or from sessions of Congress. This made it entirely safe for them to take

Sao Paulo Is Left Without Government; American Planes Shipped.

(Associated Press.)

The federal government of Brazil, tottering after three weeks of revolution in the north, the south and the west, has fallen before dissension within its ranks and insurgent attacks from without.

President Washington Luis, personally defying demands for his resignation, has been deposed by high army and navy officers of the federal forces in Rio de Janeiro.

His authority has been completely supplanted by a military junta, which has proposed peace overtures to the insurgent leaders for the immediate ending of the civil war.

Prestes Hiding, Belief.

Hostilities between the federal and insurgent armies in Sao Paulo State were brought to an abrupt halt by news of the fall of the conservative administration.

In Sao Paulo, the country's commercial metropolis, all government officials fled, leaving the city without an administration and federal troops without instructions.

President-elect Julio Prestes, who visited President Hoover during a preinaugural tour last summer, was believed to be hiding somewhere in the state. He was formerly Governor of Sao Paulo.

Downfall of Luis Hailed.

The downfall of Washington Luis was hailed with enthusiasm by the populace of Brazil's big cities, as well as by the insurgents. The red banners of the Liberals, principal backers of the revolution, were flaunted everywhere.

The deposed president was held in the government palace under guard.

The insurgent representatives in Buenos Aires announced that the rebel leaders would leave immediately for Rio de Janeiro to confer with the junta about reorganization of the government. Dr. Getulio Vargas, their commander in chief, stated he would refuse to take part in any government based upon military distatorship.

Street Cars Are Rerouted to E Street Causing Congestion There.

Blanketing the center of the F street shopping district with smoke and attracting a crowd of approximately 15,000 persons, a four-alarm fire last night destroyed Morrison's, Inc., at 1109 F street northwest, an establishment devoted to women's and misses' wear.

Damage was estimate last night at $50,000 by the manager of the store, Richard Berg, of the Annopolis Hotel. The store is leased to a New York concern by Richard W. Henderson, of this city. It was founded in 1894 and the present building was erected in 1902.

The entire stock of the store and interior fittings were destroyed. The fire started in the cellar and the flames ate their way through the elevator shaft and spread over the three floors of the establishment. Firemen attacked the blaze from three directions, F street, Eleventh street and G street.

F Street Front Active.

Most of the real fighting was concentrated on the F street front and it was from here that the big crowd received the thrills as the firemen plunged into the thick billows of smoke. Maneuvers at the other points were precautionary.

More than half a dozen stores were endangered by the possibility of the fire spreading. These included the Happiness Candy Store on one side and Learner's on the other, the New York Waist Store, the Barbara Stores, the Berger Emerald Toe Hosiery Co., Peoples Drug Co. and the Harrison Jewelry Co.

First reports were that the fire had broken out in the Philipsborn store, also a woman's apparel establishment, on Eleventh street.

Fire Was Smoky One.

The fire was a distinctly smoky one and scarcely a flame was seen on the outside from the start to the finish. The blaze had a good headway by the time the first apparatus arrived. The successive alarms were sent in within a period of 20 minutes.

Due to the heavy theater traffic on F street, it was possible to use only one line of hose until the thoroughfare was cleared. This took about fifteen minutes. Street cars were rerouted from F street along E street. Congestion was created on E street when the additional cars began operating there.

At the time of the outbreak of the fire, the Happiness Candy Shop was crowded with theater patrons. They were driven from the place by the

RED ARMIES PILLAGE CHINESE PROVINCES

HUGE RANSOMS ASKED

Shanghai, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Missionaries arriving today from devastated areas said anti-American and anti-British Red armies were swarming over three provinces of China, killing thousands of natives. They were reported robbing and burning foreign as well as Chinese property in a campaign against Christianity and capitalism said to be inspired by Russian influences.

Many missionaries have fled, and others, their missions destroyed, are held for millions of dollars ransom.

The south half of China, said the missionaries, was in danger of turning communistic unless the government sent at least 200,000 seasoned troops against bandits and Communists.

Arriving from Kian with demands for $3,500,000 gold ransom for fourteen missionaries held captive, Father de Jenlis, French, and Bishop Magniani, Italian, reported terrible conditions.

Twenty thousand Communists, said De Jenlis, captured Kian October 5 and began systematic pillaging.

Two thousand Kian residents, De Jenlis estimated, were slain, 1,000 in the first ten days and 1,000 after he left the city. Other reports had stated the number was at least 8,000.

The terriorized populace, said De Jenlis, was professing communism to avert massacre. He believed fully half of Kiangsi Province's 30,000,000 had declared themselves reds, as had similar proportions of the populace of Hupeh and Hunan.

Editor Held on Charge Of Shooting Official

Madison, W. Va., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—A man identified as Amos Sullivan, 30, a special officer of Logan County, was wounded seriously early today when an attempt was made to enter the plant of the Coal Valley News here. Elmer Jones, brother of the Coal Valley News editor and assistant editor of the paper, was placed under $5,000 bond on a charge of malicious shooting.

Luther Jones, the editor, said that he believed that Sullivan, accompanied by two other men, attempted to enter the plant to destroy equipment used in publication of the Guyan Valley News, a weekly established recently to oppose Republican candidates for county offices.

HOOVER NOT TO CALL 'JOBLESS' CONGRESS

MAIL WORK RULE LIFTED

The pendulum of business yesterday seemed to have swung decidedly high on the side of prosperity, with indications from many sources that the period of depression will soon be replaced by a revival "greater than America has ever before known," as one industrialist put it.

Developments of the day included a statement by President Hoover expressing belief that the administration's unemployment relief organization could meet the situation without a special session of Congress; a firm upward trend in the market despite overthrow of the Brazilian government, and optimistic statements from such men as Charles M. Schwab, James S. Farrell, John J Raskob and Will H. Hays.

Col. Arthur Woods' unemployment organization began to function with the appointment of Fred C. Croxton, of Columbus, Ohio, as the first of three regional directors to work with the States and Col. Woods urged voters to support sound bond issues at November elections to further relieve unemployment.

(Associated Press.)

Confidence that voluntary service by the American people would enable the administration's unemployment relief organization to cope with the problem of finding jobs for breadwinners was expressed yesterday by President Hoover in silencing reports he would call Congress in special session.

RECOGNITION NOW ISSUE

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

The sudden and dramatic triumph of the revolutionists in Brazil has placed the Government of the United States in a position which, to say the least, is temporarily embarrassing.

Only last Wednesday President Hoover went to the support of the Brazilian government that has just fallen. On the advice of Secretary of State Stimson, he ordered an embargo on all shipments of American-made arms and munitions to the rebel forces.

A few days before this, Secretary of State Stimson had announced that the governmeent of President Washington Luis had a "perfect right" to buy all of the American arms it wanted to buy. Thereupon the Navy Department gave permission to the Martin Airplane Co., of Baltimore, to sell to the Brazilian government twelve planes which were being built for the Navy.

What will happen, now that the rebels have succeeded in driving President Luis from office, remains to be seen. Secretary Stimson was not prepared to make any predictions yesterday. As a matter of fact, it was late in the day before he was even officially apprised as to what had happened.

Toward closing time at the State Department there came a cablegram from Ambassador Edwin V. Morgan informing Secretary Stimson that

WEST VIRGINIA WINS OVER G. U. TEAM, 14-7

BARTRUG INVADING STAR

By JACK ESPEY.

An alert, rangy crew of raw-boned huskies from West Virginia University came to Griffith Stadium last night and before 17,000 fur-covered fans spoiled Georgetown's annual alumni homecoming game by snatching a one-touchdown decision, 14 to 7. And worse from a Georgetown point of view, it was the second successive loss for Tom Mills' men, thus inscribing on the Blue and Gray record a splotch that hasn't been there in seven years.

For 56 minutes of the game, Georgetown was deprived of a score through numerous fumbles, blocked punts and interceptions of its passes on which West Virginia capitalized to the fullest. Finally, in the waning moments, Johnny Scalzi fired a fast, straight pass into the arms of Phil Mooney, who caught the ball while running across the goal line for a touchdown. Scalzi hung up the seventh Georgetown point with a drop-kick.

West Virginia took the lead in the first five mirutes when Capt. Walter "Red" Gordon recovered the ball behind Georgetown's goal line after the oval, propelled by Eddie Bartrug on a punt, had struck the leg of Scalzi and bounced into the touchdown zone. Bartrug place-kicked the extra point to give his team a 7-to-0 advantage.

Gangster's Body Found in Deserted Saloon While Police Wade Through Maze of Theories in Machine-Gun Passing of Moran's Henchmen.

Chicago, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Gangland's killers have gone into action again. A "big shot" and a plain hoodlum were assassinated within 24 hours.

While the crime commission was scratching from its list of public enemies the name of Joe Aiello, the body of John Guida, hoodlum of the West Side "42" gang, was found behind the bar of a deserted saloon.

Police looked for Joseph Liebrock, owner of the saloon. An extortion plot was advanced as a possible cause of Guida's death.

Aiello went the way of Dion O'Banion, Hymie Weiss and other North Side gang bosses. Dozens of machine gun bullets pierced his body, fired from ambush.

The gang chieftain was mown down the first time he appeared on the streets in a fortnight. His haven had been the apartment of Patsy Prestogiacomo, a supposed friend, who now is missing.

Police believed they had evidence he betrayed Aiello, or, in the language of the gangs, put him on the spot.

A locksmith said Prestogiacomo had the bell and speaking tube removed from his apartment, saying they were out of order. It was the absence of this equipment that caused a taxi driver to search for some time before he could find the apartment of "Mr. Presto," by whom he had been called. Police believed this was a ruse of the gang to give them plenty of time to prepare for Aiello's emergence from the hiding place.

In Aiello's pocket was a railroad ticket for Texas, indicating, police

Calvin Coolidge Says:

Not only the interest of the students themselves but that of the general public in the college sports, of which football is easily the chief, indicates a very wholesome national development. Such sports should be kept purely amateur. That is the main attraction that they hold. Very few would care to see a contest between hired champions of different educational institutions.

Of course a college is primarily to educate the head, rather than the legs. But young people require a physical activity that can not be repressed without mental injury. Dr. Edward Hitchcock was fond of telling us at Amherst that Horace Greeley said college boys were horned cattle. That is a typical newspaper attitude which reports public disorders and is silent concerning the serious work of the classroom. Yet the mental and physical sides must develop together.

The danger lies in mistaking the means for the end. Games are not merely to capture championships, but to develop minds and bodies. They should be played with every effort to win, but the result may be just as good to the college students if the team loses. It is not the score but the training and playing for all you are worth that counts.

Stepmother of Dead Girl To Be Arraigned in Murder

Uncle of Child Also Is Named on First Degree Charge, Although Detective, Father of Victim, Holds Him Innocent.

Denver, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin will be called into court tomorrow to answer a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death of her 10-year-old stepdaughter, Leona, whose body was found in Berkeley Park Lake October 17.

At the same time Frank O'Loughlin, uncle of the slain child, will be arraigned upon a similar charge.

Information naming the two were filed today, with Leo O'Loughlin, a city detective and the father of Leona, indorsing the charges.

"I am attesting this information against my brother Frank, not because I believe him guilty or in any way involved, but because I desire to have the accusations made against him cleared up completely," said O'Loughlin. The detective spoke no word in defense of his wife.

Statements of Mrs. O'Loughlin's attorneys to the effect "she is wholly innocent and knows absolutely nothing concerning the commission of the crime" indicated plainly that a plea of not guilty would be her answer to the murder complaint.

Detective O'Loughlin said his wife and his brother "despised each other." The brother had been living with the detective and his wife.

The murder charge against Frank O'Loughlin was preferred largely as

Reserves Hold Crowd Back.

F street between Eleven and Twelfth streets was a network of fire hose. Fire engines and ladders blocked the street from curb to curb. The big crowd readily observed the orders of police reserves and kept to boundaries on the further side of Eleventh and Twelfth streets.

Police detailed to the football game at Griffith Stadium were dispatched to the scene of the fire under the supervision of Inspector Louis J. Stoll. Attracted by the departure of the police, a portion of the football crowd followed and swelled throngs witnessing the fire.

Automobiles left by their owners on F street were pushed to safety by the police reserves. Laughs were given the spectators by the bursting of a hose resulting in firemen and a number of newspapermen getting a ducking.

The first and second alarms were received at 9:04 o'clock. The third alarm was recorded at 9:09 o'clock and the fourth at 9:17 o'clock. Apromxiately 20 fire engine companies responded to the call. The fire was brought under control about 45 minutes after it started. No firemen were reported injured. Chief George S. Watson was in charge.

Tower Ladder Blocked.

Some difficulty was experienced in hoisting the tower ladder on G street because of the many automobiles parked at the curb, making it impossible for the engines to get close enough to the building. The ladder was at such an angle that it was found necessary to use heavy rope to suspend the ladder to prevent it collapsing.

As the fire was brought under control hose on Twelfth street was elevated on tresles, enabling street cars to resume operation. When the late moving picture crowd emerged from the Columbia Theater across the street exclamations of amazement were heard at the sight of the ruined store. Many of these theater patrons had remained in the theater, ignorant of the fire, it was said.

Ayala Succumbs To Duel Injuries

Paraguayan Minister of Finance Had Slain His Foe.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Oct. 24 (A.P.). Former President and Minister of Finance Eligio Ayala died today of wounds he suffered last night in an affray with an employe of the Agricultural Bank whom he killed. The former president was wounded three times in the abdomen. The shooting was the outcome of a personal quarrel.

Senor Ayala was elected president of Paraguay in 1924 and held that post until 1928 when Dr. J. Guggiari was elected and Ayala entered the cabinet as finance minister.

CHINA IN EARNEST FOR NAVY, IS CLAIM

NAVAL MISSION ON TOUR

Tokyo, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Japanese observers believe China must be in earnest about building up a real navy, for the Nanking regime has concluded an agreement with the Tokyo government whereby the naval academy at Etajima, the Annapolis of Japan, will give instruction to Chinese youths selected for this training by Nanking.

Before the revolution of 1914 toppled the Manchu dynasty Chinese cadets were trained in Japanese naval schools, but republican China allowed the arrangement to lapse.

Long Jest in World.

The Chinese navy, divided into many factions, most of them for sale to the highest bidder, has long been a jest in the Orient, for the venality of its leaders as much as for the poor quality of its men and boats. Its most effective units are a few cruisers of less than 3,000 tons displacement and more than 30 years old.

Nanking seems determined to change this, and recently dispatched a naval mission under a veteran sailor and politician, Admiral Tu Hsi-kuei, around the world to gather wisdom from the seamen of the great powers.

Chinese cadets have been taught in the army schools of Nippon for many years. Some of the outstanding generals in the perennial civil war of China received a smattering of military lore in this country, and several others have been sending their sons across the Yellow Sea to learn the secret of the strength that makes Japan one of the great powers.

85 in Tokyo College.

The 1930 graduating class of the Tokyo army war college included 85 Chinese in a total of 303, the Chinese receiving a shorter and more elementary course than their Japanese fellows. Chang Hsueh-ming, younger brother of Gen. Chang Hsueh-liang, the Manchuria war lord, is a recent product of this system.

The Japanese naval and military authorities offer instructions to Chinese cadets on the assumption that if ever China does develop effective land and sea forces their leaders will be bound to Japan by ties of gratitude and friendship.

DEPRESSION IS CHIEF RHODE ISLAND ISSUE

GERRY FORCES CERTAIN

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 24.—Senator Metcalfe has just eliminated the prohibition issue from this State's campaign by coming out wet, so the Democrats are depending largely on the depression to return former Senator Gerry to the Senate and elect their State ticket.

And they are very cocky about doing this very thing, at least the Gerry forces are. One of the arguments against their success is the fact that all of the Democrats do not seem to share either the enthusiasm or the determination of the Gerry forces.

The Republicans hope privately to pull through by a bare 5,000, and they may do it. In fact, if the Democrats win it will be in spite of themselves. They have not made the best of their opportunities and the forces of National Committeeman Quinn and those of Gerry, while outwardly being in accord, are not striking it off together as well as they should.

The outcome depends on just how strong the depression is reflected in the vote. It is something that can not be gauged today. That there is political unrest among the thousands of industrial workers, some unemployed and others working on part time, both sides assume, but in both this State and in Massachusetts it is an intangible thing.

Unlike the situation in Ohio, for example, the unrest has not manifest itself to the extent that either the Republicans or Democrats can measure it. What frightens the Republicans is its seeming sullenness. They are hoping, though, that it may prove to be nothing more than a bugaboo.

Of course, like Massachusetts, the depression is not entirely new to this State. The textile industry was badly depressed as far back as the campaign of 1928. It is a commentary on the present campaign that that year the Democrats must have gotten out every vote they could possibly rake and scrape, and their Presidential candidate won by only 1,400, Gerry himself losing by 3,000.

His defeat was caused, however, by Senator Hebert, of French extraction, drawing the French vote from him, and also because he neglected his campaign. He depended too much on Smith pulling him through. Gerry is not neglecting anything this year. He has even established another residence, a third one, in the State, and both he and Mrs. Gerry are most active.

And, of course, when the Democrats polled their maximum strength in 1928 the Republicans polled theirs, but the outcome would seem to justify the statement there will have to be a lot of depression defections for a Democratic victory this year. A sufficient number of these defections does not appear on the surface. Yet the Democrats insist they exist, and the Republicans are obviously afraid that the Democrats are right.

If they are, there is a vast difference in the Eastern and Middle Western temperaments. As soon as you get into Ohio you feel the revolt, hear threats of ballot reprisals openly and loudly made.

Politicians Meet Silence.

In this State the politicians go out among the workers looking for the signs and meet with a strange silence. It causes the Republicans to think maybe there is no trouble brewing after all and then they shudder at the thought that it may be a dangerous sullenness.

If it is a sullenness that will break out on November 4, then Senator Metcalfe is surely ruined because he owns just about two-thirds of the textile plans, some of them operating on part time and others not operating at all.

It may be that the working conditions in these plants, all of them, not just the senator's, have something to do with the silent attitude of the workers. The plants are all honeycombed with spies looking for Bolshevists adn any sign of disorder. One guards his speech under such conditions.

Metcalf's Only Risk.

It is certain, however, that Metcalf is not up against any such condition as former Senator Butler is in Massachusetts. In that State conservative business men are off the Republican reservation because of prohibition and because they want a new deal generally.

Metcalf's only risk is the unrest among the industrial workers. He has a strong personal hold on the other strata. He has been one of the State's most respected and substantial citizens for 50 years or so. His philanthropies and benefactions extend into every phase of the State's life.

Organized labor is fighting him now because he voted to confirm Judge Parker. This fight in itself may defeat him so evenly tipped do the scales seem to be at present.

There is some friction in his campaign, serious in one or two spots, but as a whole it is moving more smoothly than Gerry's. Both tickets are all Yankee at the top, but both sides are seeking to appeal to the various nationalities of the State with candidates for lesser State offices.

Politics Taken Seriously.

It is noteworthy on how seriously they play the political game in this little State that although Metcalfe had intended for months to come out wet, he did not do so until the other day. He wanted to wait until it was too late for an independent candidate to file. Incidentally, his wet pronouncement may cost him some badly needed dry votes, not that they will go to Gerry, but they may be withheld from Metcalfe.

The State is voting on a referendum on the question of whether the eighteenth amendment should be repealed. It is generally admitted that it will be carried overwhelmingly.

No changes are looked for in the congressional line-up, the Republicans holding the First and Second districts and the Democrats the Third.

WONDRACK LISTS DRILL.

Coach Artie Wondrack has listed a practice for his Northern Prep players etonight at 6:30 o'clock sharp. The session will be held on the Georgia Avenue and Piney Branch Road Field.

GOVERNMENT ARMS WITNESS

Col. Calvin Goddard, ballistics expert, as he appeared just before testifying in the trial of Herbert M. Campbell, charged with the murder of Mary Baker.

FATE OF HERBERT CAMPBELL RESTS ON BALLISTICS TESTS

His objection was overruled and an exception was noted to the ruling.

Most of Col Goddard's testimony was of a technical nature in which he described the method of boring the barrel of a gun. This method, he said, leaves distinctive traces which, in turn, are inscribed on bullets fired through the barrel so that no two guns make the same impression.

Diameter of Bullets Cited.

Mr. Smith, on cross-examination, asked if Col. Goddard had measured the width of the scratches and elevations on the mortal bullets and compared them with measurements of the test bullets.

He replied that he hadn't, adding that under the method he follows these are unnecessary.

Mr. Smith then asked the diameter of the mortal bullets. To which Col. Goddard replied, ".3095 and .3098 of an inch." This was taken to mean that defense expert will claim that the mortal bullets were too large to go through the barrel of Campbell's gun.

Dr. Hamilton has reported that the mortal bullets are fifteen one-thousandths of an inch larger than the bore of Campbell's gun.

Smokeless Powder Used.

The Government expert added that smokeless powder was used in the death bullets, which agrees with a report made by Dr. Hamilton. Each agrees that the cartridges turned over by Campbell were of black powder.

The Government expert told the jury that he identified bullets through a comparison microscope, by means of which he was able to view the two objects through the one eyepiece and note the similarity between them.

"Do you identify bullets by photographs," asked Mr. Smith.

"No, by examination."

"Then the only way you tell whether bullets are the same is through this comparison microscope?"

"Yes."

"Each one of these microscopes have separate focussing arrangements, is that it?"

"Yes."

"What happens when they are out of focus?"

"The two images would show a disjunction.

Natural Light Used.

Col. Goddard added that he did not use artificial illumination when making pictures. He uses daylight.

He also explained that there are slight variations in bullets fired from the same gun but that there are sufficient underlying markings to determine their identity.

"How many examinations of this gun did you make?"

"One was sufficient to satisfy me that it was the gun that fired the death bullets."

"Why did you make a subsequent examination?"

"I did not make a subsequent examination. I merely made more photographs."

"Is there any fixed rule which you may tell the jury to enable them to distinguish for themselves the difference in bullets?"

"No."

Hamilton Bullets Introduced.

"How many other ballistics experts use the same method as you?"

Col. Goddard enumerated a dozen ballistics experts in various cities that follow the same method as he does.

Then Mr. Smith introduced in evidence ten test bullets which Dr. Hamilton had fired through the Campbell pistol. He asked Col. Goddard if he could say whether they had been fired from the same pistol.

"Not without a microscope," he answered.

"Is is possible to place a bullet back into the barrel of a gun after it has been fired?"

"No, the impact of the explosion tends to mushroom the base of the bullet. There are two impacts which causes the bullet to bulge. One received by the explosion, another when the nose of the bullet strikes an object.

Capt. Kelly Takes Stand.

Department of Justice Agent Samuel W. Hardy testified that he had taken the gun to Chicago to Col. Goddard to have tests made, and completed the chain of custody of the weapon.

Capt. Edward Kelly, assistant chief of the Detective Bureau, told the story of his investigation of Campbell.

"In the latter part of April I went, with other officers, to Campbell's office to ask him about Hermann Barrere. The sheriff said 'Do you think that Barrere could have anything to do with the murder of this girl?'

"Campbell said, 'Yes, I do. He is a fellow of a mean disposition and quick-tempered.'

"Fields said, 'Why didn't you say something to me about Barrere when he was locked up in jail?'

"Campbell said, 'Well, sheriff, I have told you about a few other things over here that turned out to be false. I thought this might be false, too.'

"I next saw Campbell on April 11, when I went to his office with Agents Farrell and Hardy, of the Department of Justice.

"He said: 'I am afraid you're here at the wrong time. I have Mrs. Barrere, Barrere's brother from Richmond, and Miss Heiner in my office and I am trying to locate them.

"'I'm telling them that I'm getting an alibi fixed up for them to help him, but I'm only doing that to get in with them so that the brother will locate Hermann and put him in my hands so that I can turn him over to police.'

"I next saw him on May 15 when I went to his office and asked him what had been stolen from his home. He told me a suit of clothes, some of his wife's clothing, an alarm clock and some candy.

"I said: 'Do you know whether a pair of gloves were stolen.'

"He said: 'I had a pair of pigskin gloves. They might be gone.'"

"I said: 'Are you positive that the gloves are pigskin.'"

"He said, 'Yes.'"

Size of Glove Described.

"He told me they were size 9½ and said he would be able to identify them. 'They have dirt and grease and oil on them from fooling around my automobile.'

"We went to Inspector Shelby's office and he tried one of the gloves on and said: 'Yes, these are mine. I can tell because of the oil and grease on them, and because of the thumb and finger where the leather is skinned.' The glove fit his hand."

Mr. Collins then exhibited the gloves found in the trap basin with Mary Baker's clothing. "Those are the ones he identified," said Kelly.

"I next saw Campbell on June 9 in the Hurley-Wright Building. He said that he had taken the gun to Sheriff Fields because he thought Barrere could have stolen it and replaced it in his office.

Barrere's Movements Traced.

"He said that when Barrere went to his house on April 10 he could have stolen the gun. He also said that on April 11 (the day of Mary Baker's death), Barrere came to his house while he was eating breakfast to see about a painting contract. He came back at 4:45 to sign the contract."

Capt. Kelly then repeated the story of "the man with the wart on his nose" and the subsequent "finding" of the gun in Campbell's office.

"He said he thought Barrere might have put it there or that the stranger might have put it there while he went to his house to look for it."

Capt. Kelly told what Commonwealth Attorney William C. Gloth and Sheriff Howard B. Fields told the court on Thursday regarding the breakdown of Campbell's allbi on June 20.

Alleged Lies Admitted.

"When we broke the alibi down, Campbell was perspiring pretty freely and said, 'My God! Mr. Kelly, I've lied to you.'

"I said to him: 'Now let us get down to that fantastic story of yours about the man with the wart on his nose and the gun.'

"It's no use,' Campbell replied, 'I've told it so often I believe it myself.'"

The defendant listened attentively to Capt. Kelly's testimony as did his brother, Frank, and his father, Loudoun Campbell. The defendant's wife is excluded from the courtroom because she is to be an alibi witness.

Campbell Praises Kelly.

After Capt. Kelly testified, Campbell called a reporter to his side and said: "You can tell the world that Capt. Kelly is the whitest man in the world. Everything he said on the stand is the exact truth. He didn't try to crucify me like some of the others did. I don't mind listening to a man like Kelly testify. I know he won't lie to hurt me."

Defense attorneys announced yesterday that the gloves which had been missing from Campbell's home have been found and that they will be introduced as evidence.

Campbell Jury Deputy To Celebrate Birthday

James F. (Big Jim) McCarthy, one of the deputy United States marshals in charge of the jury in the Campbell murder trial, will celebrate his sixtieth birthday tomorrow and will have a birthday party even though encompassed by the rules governing sequestering of juries.

This will be possible because the Metropolitan Hotel, where the jury is quartered, and where he has been in charge of many juries in the past, will be host at the party. The hotel, it is understood, will give not only Deputy Marshal McCarthy and his assistant a turkey dinner, but also will provide a free feed for the members of the jury.

Deputy Marshal McCarthy stated yesterday that the only thing the hotel would not supply would be the birthday cake. This will be provided by Mrs. McCarthy and will contain 60 candles, it was said.

EVEN SHY PERSON CAN HAVE HIS DAY

WIDOW AIDS HIS WHIRLS

Special to The Washington Post.

Kansas City, Oct. 24.—One never knows when ectasy shall knock him cold, or is it hot? In a moment it can lift dull care, scratch life's humdrum and abashments and let one in on victory. It did that to Frank Whipperman last night. Nobody was more surprised than he.

These things happen in small and unannounced places and ways, to be sure. Whipperman sat in the lobby of the Robert E. Lee Hotel last night, wondering how to pass the evening. His reports were in, he had enjoyed his dinner. Here he was a portly and genteel traveling man, with a desire for a quietly enjoyable evening and far away from home and fireside.

He might have gone to a show. He might have done any of the usual things a traveling salesman is supposed to do. But Whipperman isn't the type. Believe it or not, he's a home-loving man and actually shy socially. He has a bald spot and weighs 210 pounds.

Old-Fashioned Waltzes.

His eye now caught a small notice in the paper of a dance at the Get-Together Club at Arcadia Hall, 2906 Brooklyn avenue. Old-fashioned waltzes, square dances and a reel or two were to be allowed. The Rev. John L. Jones, of the Get-Together Club has a way of specializing in these dances. They attract middle-aged people, and such people compose the club.

At about the same moment Mrs. Mayme Hall, a widow, was reading the notice in her home at 1303 East Robert Gillham road.

H'm, mused the cautious Mr. Whipperman. It'd be fun to trip a waltz again. He has small feet, lively ankles. But to go way out there may be to risk a chance of not getting a dance, knowing nobody?

On Opposite Sides.

He went. So did Mrs. Hall. They sat on opposite sides of the floor while the saxophones whooped fox trots and the younger Get-Together folk darted and jigged.

At 10:15 o'clock Mr. Jones called a halt. From behind his clerical collar he announced the big event of the night, $5 first prize to the best couple over 40 years old. The orchestra changed to a waltz.

"Let Me Call You Sweetheart," the saxophone moaned. The cornet whinnied the old refrain. Mr. Whipperman actually was uncomfortable. He had danced to that tune in barns years ago. But he knew not a spinster or widow here tonight.

"Shucks," he said to himself, "I've no business in this place."

But at that moment Mrs. Hall passed with her sister, and Mr. Whipperman bobbed up automatically, almost without a word, and found himself tip-toeing onto the floor with her. Of course he mumbled something about "like to dance?" and Mrs. Hall smiled doubtfully in reply.

The rest of the story is that Whipperman-Hall won the dance.

INDIAN DEER TRAP IN WISCONSIN CLEW

SPEARMEN LAY IN WAIT

Special to The Washington Post.

Goodman, Wis., Oct. 24.—Archeologists who have delved into the lore of the Wisconsin Indians have obtained accounts of a legendary "slaughter house" device of the aborigines known as a "deer fence," but never have found definite trace of one.

Such traces are believed now to exist north of here at the Florence Martinette County line on the only definitely designed site of such a fence. Although few present residents of the vicinity are aware of the fact, the Village of Fence on Highway 101 was named after the deer fence.

Built Barrier Two Miles Long.

John Pigo, an old Indian who lives back in the woods southwest of Fence, relates that his father told of the days when the fence was in use, a little more than a century ago; and some of the other settlers of the vicinity are said to have found traces of the fence.

The Indians built a barrier about 2 miles long from Lake Hilbert to the Popple River. They felled trees, one across another, and made this tangle impassable by stacking brush. The fence was used in the fall to lay up a winter supply of venison. Part of the tribe would scatter through the country north of the fence and drive the deer through the woods toward the barrier. When the animals found their way blocked they headed, or were driven, west to the river. A deer, hard pressed, will take to the water, where few, if any, animals can cope with it.

Bowmen Lay in Wait.

At the junction of the deer fence and the Popple River the picked bowmen and spearmen of the tribe lay in wait and slaughtered the deer as fast as they appeared.

There is reason to believe that the fence at this point is one of the very last of such slaughtering devices to be used by the Indians, if not the last. The accounts which white men have obtained from Indians indicate that deer fences were in use for generations before the whites appeared.

Some efforts may be made by archeologists to find and view the remains of the fence before the last vestige vanishes, in order to establish positively that the stretch from Lake Hilbert to the Popple River actually was the site of a deer fence.

PRECAUTION GIVEN FOR TUNNEL LABOR

California Commissioners on Safety Present Set of Don'ts for Workers.

METHANE GAS DEADLY

Special to The Washington Post.

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—California does not appreciate the perils of methane gas to its 34,000 mine, tunnel and oil workers and should take steps immediately to guard them from this deadly menace.

That is the outstanding recommendation to make underground employment safer, contained in a report to Gov. Young in Sacramento by the commission of five he appointed after twelve met death in the Mitchell Tunnel of the Hetch-Hetchy project.

The commission consists of Robert G. Sproul, president of the University of California; Daniel Harrington, chief of the safety division, United States Bureau of Mines; Fred W. Bradley, past president of the American Mining Institute; M. C. Sloss, former associate justice of the Supreme Court, and Michael Casey, labor leader.

Conference Is Advised.

To provide the maximum of safety underground, the commission urges a conference of a San Francisco City engineer, an engineer of the Bureau of Mines, and another from the Industrial Accident Commission.

These engineers, the report says, should devote their energies to ascertaining the gas areas and posting them. In this connection the report points out that danger lurks in 25-100 of 1 per cent of methane gas. If more than 100 cubic feet of gas is discovered, the men should be sent to the surface immediately, the commission says.

That present methods of inspection are inadeqate is another assertion, the report saying that only one inspector is now employed on underground workings employing 9,000 men.

Ten Inspectors Urged.

It is recommended that ten men be employed as inspectors, that they be of the highest grade obtainable and the State pay them high salaries. They should make inspections monthly and render written reports.

As 50 to 80 per cent of the explosions are caused by sparks, the commission declares all electrical apparatus should be carefully protected and that trolley locomotives should be displaced with sparkproof storage battery locomotives.

All blasting should be done by electricity, the report says, smoking should be prohibited in and around underground workings, and workmen should be severely punished for taking smoking materials into mines or tunnels.

Figures are submitted showing the fatality rate in California mines and tunnels was 5.22 in every thousand from 1901 to 1927, inclusive, whereas the United States rate is only 3.25. On the 36 miles of Hetch-Hetchy tunnels the rate has been 2.17.

80 Tons of Feed for $8.

Columbus, Tex., Oct. 25 (A.P.).—It cost Robert Gillespie $8 to work out his own drought salvation and provide 80 tons of ensilage for his cows. Facing a total loss on an eight-acre field of hegari, Gillespie dug a dirt tank where it would irrigate the field and filled it with water from his well.

CANNIBAL HENS WORRY KEEPERS

WAYS TO CONTROL VICE

Boston, Oct. 24.—There is nothing more exasperating or worrisome to the poultry keeper than to house a lot of pullets in the fall, get them into good position and then gradually to lose a few birds, day by day, from cannibalism and prolapsis. Losses from this vice have become more prevalent in recent years, as the growing practice has been to house and not let them out of doors.

Cannibalism is distinctly a vice and is acquired through birds learning the taste of raw meat and blood and developing the habit of eating each other, the vice most often being a result of prolapsis or inversion of the oviduct. Prolapsis is especially common in pullets as they start to lay.

The laying of the first few large eggs is apt to invert a portion of the oviduct, exposing red, tender tissue. Usually this will be almost immediately drawn back into the body as the egg is laid, but if it should not be, or if for any reason some of the birds pick at the exposed flesh and start bleeding, the habit of cannibalism is quickly acquired and, once started, it is very hard to break the flock of the habit.

Individual birds become so crazy for blood and acquire such a desire for it that they will remain around the nests and go poking their heads into the nests where birds are laying, in an effort to pick at the red tissue of the oviduct, which is exposed at the time the egg is laid. Such birds become very dangerous in a flock, killing one or more pullets each day.

There are a number of ways in which this vice can be controlled and prevented. First, it is well to have dark nests, where the layers enter from the back through a dark alley into a dark nest. Under such conditions there is much less chance of birds acquiring the cannibalistic habit, and even if they should acquire it, it is impossible for them to injure many birds at laying time, because of the dark, secluded nature of such nests.

Providing adequate nesting space, with good nesting material, is necessary in order to encourage laying in the nests and keeping the birds from laying on the floor. If the vice becomes firmly established, one of the best ways to reduce losses is to let the birds out of doors, providing a good, clean, sanitary yard. This keeps the birds away from the nests, gives them something to do, inducing exercise and activity, thus checking the losses. Littering the house with deep coarse straw litter is helpful as opposed to having the litter of the pen peat moss or shavings.

If the flock is troubled with prolapsis to an excessive degree, it probably means the hens are getting too much protein and that egg production is being forced too rapidly for the age and development of the birds. Reducing the amount of protein will help slow up production and prevent this. Feed of considerable bulk and fiber is helpful in preventing pick-outs. Rolled oats and barley can be fed in the scratch.

TWO ARE ACCUSED IN CHILD'S MURDER

the result of a statement made by Mrs. O'Loughlin during a prolonged grilling in which police allege she accepted responsibility for the child's death. The interrogators quoted her as crying:

"Why don't you get Frank and give us a sanity test? We must be crazy."

John Weisz, a brother of Mrs. O'Loughlin, associated himself with defense counsel. He told newspapermen he had talked with his sister today for the first time since her arrest last Sunday and was convinced she is guiltless.

"She told me she is innocent. She denies she made any kind of confession to any one. She told me she had no knowledge concerning Leona's death," he said.

Chief among today's developments in the police investigation was a statement from authorities they had obtained two "leads" from a conversation between Mrs. O'Loughlin and her attorney, John Keating.

A police said a microphone had been installed in the detective bureau with a loud speaker hooked up in the office of the chief of police, some distance away. Keating was permitted to interview his client yesterday at police headquarters for the first time since her arrest. The interview was obtained by virtue of a court order.

Other testimony of similar importance was given, police said, by Douglas Millican, Mrs. O'Loughlin's 8-year old son by a former marriage. The boy told police he had not been permitted to eat rice which was served to Leo O'Loughlin and Leona the night the child disappeared. Douglas said his mother did not eat the rice.

Ground glass was found in the viscera of Leona at the autopsy and bits of glass were taken from the stomach of her father, who became ill that night and was taken to a hospital.

CHICAGO HOODLUM GOES WAY OF AIELLO

said that he feared for his life and was ready to flee to a "healthier climate," probably Mexico. His widow and children told the police he had not slept at home for a month, although he had communicated with them by telephone.

He was the second member of the once powerful Moran-Aiello-Zuta triumvirate to die in his boots. Jack Zuta, allied with Aiello and George ("Bugs") Moran, once all-powerful in the North Side liquor-vice racketeer ring, was murdered less than three months ago as he made merry while in hiding at a nearby Wisconsin resort. He was the first of the "public enemies" to make his exit in death. Aiello's demise reduced the list published by the Chicago Crime Commission to 26.

Moran, recently arrested as a vagrant, at present is sparring with the law in Municipal Court and with Federal agents in connection with alleged evasion of the income-tax laws.

This North Side triumvirate was the sole "big shot" opposition to the "Scarface" Al Capone mob, and police theorized that Capone henchmen engineered the latest slaying.

Police had few clews, a burned automobile, a pair of worn gray gloves, a thumb print on a chocolate drop—and they turned active attention to a number of theories.

Another theory was that the slaying was a sequel to the slaying of Alfred Lingle, Tribune reporter, last June. Another was that his death was penalty for his attempts to grasp control of the powerful Unione Siciliane. Still another was the generally known rivalry between the North Side triumvirate and Al Capone.

Capone's name also came into the investigation of the Unione Siciliane theory, for it was known that Aiello made great attempts to squeeze Capone from high rank in the union.

Aiello was the fifth of ten pallbearers for Michel Merlo, once active in the Unione, to be assassinated. The others were Lombardo, Lolordo, Sam Olivere and Joe Guinta.

Final Rites Held For Charles Eslin

Funeral services were held yesterday for Charles W. Eslin, a picturesque figure in Washington and sportsman of the last century, who died Wednesday at the age of 93.

He was known as "Uncle Charley" and was born in a roadside inn, operated by his father, at Sixteenth street and Columbia road. This was a popular tavern where President Lincoln, General Grant and other dignitaries often stopped for refreshment. Mr. Eslin became famous as a hunter and horse race enthusiast. He saw his first racing on the old Holmead tract, now Columbia Heights.

As a contractor, Mr. Eslin was closely identified with the development of Washington. Working with his partner and nephew, the late William Holmead, he supervised the construction of the entire street system of Petworth, built the Fort Reno reservoir and engaged in road construction work in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Mr. Eslin was buried in Mount Olivet Cemetery in one of the first plots allotted to the cemetery. It was purchased by Mr. Eslin's father in 1858.

about the shooting since shortly after it happened, and failed to report to the police the information they possessed. William H. McKay mentioned the two men in his statement to police made Wednesday.

Inspector Shelby said he had information that the pair asociated after the crime with Mahoney and that they possibly would be held as material witnesses.

Following the inquest, held at the District Morgue, Frank Mahoney, McKay, and Mrs. Sarah Sullivan, mother of Carnell, were formally charged with murder on the police headquarters arrest book and held for the action of the grand jury.

All Refuse to Testify.

At the inquest the three persons were warned that in the event that they testified at the hearing, anything they said would be held against them, and following this warning all of them refused to testify. Mrs. Sullivan sat with bowed head all through the hearing, although she once started to the witness stand and evidently changed her mind, returning once more to her seat by the side of Mahoney and McKay. The hearing lasted more than an hour and a half.

Chief among those testifying were Headquarters Detectives Joseph Waldron and Thomas Sweeney, who performed the major part of the investigation into the shooting on the night of October 6. Their testimony was to the effect that Mahoney and Carnell had planned a hold-up on the night that Bush was shot, although they stated that Mahoney declared Bush was not their first intended victim.

Searched for Victim.

The men searched all over the city for a victim, the detectives declared, even going as far out of the city as Chevy Chase, Md., and it was on their return trip from that place that they saw Bush homeward bound as he passed them at Thomas Circle.

The detectives testified that McKay admitted to them that he knew that Mahoney and Carnell planned a hold-up, but he denied that he had any direct connection with it, or had any idea when it was to take place.

Inspector Shelby denied last night that Carnell's whereabouts was known to him, even remotely, but stated that with the extensive search which was going on all over the country, it was only a matter of days until he would be caught.

The two men, who were arrested last night, were questioned at length by detectives at headquarters, a stenographic record of their statements being made. Police later declined to disclose all that had transpired behind the closed door of the homicide squad room, where they were closeted, but stated that the two had learned of the killing through hearing conversation between Mahoney and McKay before Mahoney left with Carnell for California and also in hinted statements made by McKay after the two men had gone.

Both May Be Released.

Their excuse for not going to the police at once, they said, was that they did not know whether the whole story of Mahoney's and Carnell's connection was just a fake or the actual truth.

Inspector Shelby stated last night that both Dolan and Mills probably would be released today or tomorrow, but that Neil Burkinshaw, assistant United States attorney, handling the case, would have the final decision as to whether they would be held or not.

Dolan is employed in the District refuse department, while Mills is a clerk in the water department and stationed at the Second and Bryant streets station of the department.

Following the questioning of the men at headquarters they were locked up for the night.

EIGHT GIVEN TERMS IN PRINCE GEORGES

Six More, Convicted, Await Sentencse in Jail at Upper Marlboro.

JURY IS COMPLIMENTED

Eight persons who were convicted in Prince Georges County Circuit Court last week were sentenced yesterday by Judge Joseph C. Mattingly. Most of them were young prisoners, charged with larceny. Six more who have been convicted are in jail at Upper Marlboro awaiting sentence.

Bernard Overly, 14 years old, who pleaded guilty to a burglary charge, ing School for Boys at Lochraven. He was sentenced to the Maryland Trainwill remain in the school, learning a trade, until he is 18. Conviction on a charge of housebreaking and larceny sent 12-year-old Lawrence Chase to the House of Reformation at Cheltenham for an undeterminate sentence. Chase and his mother, both colored, were tried jointly, and the court judged it best to remove the child from the woman's influence.

Robert Tolson will serve a year in the House of Correction for stealing seven chickens. He was sentenced after he had pleaded guilty to the charge. His lawyer said that the fowls were stolen for home consumption and that there was no element of the commercial in the theft.

Four years in the penitentiary was the sentence meted out to John Tillman, William Edge, and John Samson on charges of larceny and receiving stolen goods. The grand jury returned two indictments against the trio, to one of which they pleaded guilty, and they were convicted on the other by a jury. The three will serve two years on each of the two counts. Edge asked the court for mercy, stating that he was the chief support of a widowed mother and six children, but the judge spoke of the large scale plan for stealing chickens which the three had worked out, and let the sentence stand.

Randolph Lewis will serve two years in the House of Correction on charges of larceny and receiving stolen goods, while his companion, Thomas Newman, will serve eighteen months in the same institution. The two boys were named in the same indictment, but evidence showed that Lewis was the leader in stealing an automobile.

A jury yesterday brought in a verdict of guilty in the case of William Love, colored, of Fairmont Heights, who was tried on a charge of arson. Clarence Roberts, attorney for the defense, brought in a surprise witness in Love's wife Daisy, who stated that the prosecution's chief witness had confessed that she had been bribed to testify against the man.

This witness was a small colored girl, Ellen Lowden, and the prisoner's wife swore that the child had said that she was bribed with a dollar by the complaining witness whose house was fired. The jury was out only a few minutes. Sentence was not pronounced on Love.

Judge Mattingly discharged one of the panels of the petit jury yesterday, but stated that they would have to be recalled after Thanksgiving to try several civil cases which can not be reached at this term of court.

The growth of the county and the consequently increased work of the court, make the extra term of court necessary, the judge said. Next week will be devoted to criminal cases, though there may be a few civil trials, and after that the court has to move to Calvert County.

Judge Mattingly complimented the jury on its work, saying that "the service of juries is the safeguard of society." For the hearing of cases next week, the alternate panel will be used.

A suit was filed yesterday in Prince Georges County Circuit Court to compel the appointment of a receiver for the Suburban District Building Association, of Mount Rainier. Edward M. Scott, who instituted the action, alleges that the association owes him $589.30 which he has been unable to collect, ni spite of repeated request.

Scott is represented by Eli Baer, a Baltimore attorney. Date has not yet been set for hearings on the motion.

F. B. Tolbert was held for action of the grand jury yesterday by Judge J. Chew Sheriff in Police Court at Upper Marlboro, on charge of stealing a dog valued at $150. Tolbert was also fined $5 for contempt of court because he failed to appear when his case was called Thursday at Capitol Heights. Tolbert and Sherman Booth were both charged with the theft of the dog which belonged to Frad Roach. Booth was likewise held for the grand jury. Tolbert posted bond of $300 for his appearance.

Prince Georges County has the lowest death rate of any county in the State, according to a chart issued by the State Department of Health. Not only that, but southern Maryland has the lowest rate of any section of the State, the same chart shows. While the number of deaths per 100,000 of population was lowest for the white portion, the colored section had nearly the highest rate in deaths from tuberculosis, being exceeded only by Baltimore and the Eastern Shore.

Fire companies from four Maryland towns fought a brush fire for more than eight hours yesterday. The blaze occurred in the swamp back of Bladensburg, alon gthe Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks. Companies from Mount Rainier, Brentwood, Cottage City and Bladensburg were among the fire fighters.

AMERICAN ARTIST DIES IN NEW YORK

DESCENDANT OF ASTOR

Woodstock, N. Y., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Robert Winthrop Chanler, artist and descendant of a long line of famous Americans, died at his summer home here today of heart disease after a long illness.

Famous for his paintings, he also was known as the former husband of the beautiful Italian opera star, Lina Cavelieri. His brief engagement to Isadora Duncan, was announced three years ago, the day before the dancer was killed in southern France.

He was born in New York City on February 22, 1873, the son of John Winthrop and Margaret Astor Chanler. He was a great-grandson of John Jacob Astor and included among his ancestors Gov. Winthrop, of Massachusetts, Peter Stuyvesant, the last Dutch governor of New York, and Robert Livingston, one of the drafters of the Declaration of Independence.

In his youth Chanler turned from the political career his family planned for him and devoted himself to art. Years later, however, he entered politics for a few years and won election to the State Assembly and to the post of sheriff of Dutchess County.

His most famous individual work of art is a panel, "Giraffes," which he sold to the French government in 1923, eighteen years after he completed it. It was hung in the Luxembourg Museum. The Metropolitan Museum in New York and other American collections also contain examples of his work.

He married Mlle. Cavelieri in Paris in 1910. Three months later they were separated and in 1912 they were divorced. By a prenuptial agreement that came to light on their separation, almost everything the artist owned was transferred to the singer.

This was his second marriage. His first wife was the former Julia R. Chamberlain, of Red Hook, N. Y. They were divorced in Paris after two daughters had been born.

GLOUCESTER WILL HUNT IN ETHIOPIA

DATE IS ON NOVEMBER 2

London, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The Duke of Gloucester, third son of King George, is ready to leave for Abyssinia to attend the coronation of Ras Tafari as "His Majesty, Haile Sillassie I," Emperor of Ethiopia.

The duke has had his motion picture camera overhauled, hoping to get some interesting films in the land of the Queen of Sheba and his hunting kit has also received special attention, as a big game hunt will follow the official part of his visit.

English nurses have been installed in the royal palace at Addis Ababa to superintend the infancy of the royal children, three of whom came to this country to study English at a school near Chester.

Wears Bobbed Hair.

One of the little princesses, then about 12 years old, wore the regulation school uniform and had her hair bobbed in the English style, instead of wearing the trailing robes and headdress of her race.

When she visited London she gaily played cricket with her small brothers in the gardens of a riverside hotel. At the same age her grandmother was already married and installed behind the walls of the women's compartments without opportunity for public exercise.

Sunday, November 2, has been fixed for the coronation at Addis Ababa, and the Duke of Gloucester will attend as head of the British mission. There will also be special missions from France, Italy and the United States. Nagadras Makonnen, Ethiopian minister to Great Britain, has also planned to attend.

Rites in Cathedral.

The ceremony will take place in the Cathedral of St. George, where the late empress was crowned, and will be conducted by the Coptic Bishop of Ethiopia, head of the Ethiopian Church. A fine processional road a mile or more in length extends from the cathedral to the imperial palace, and this will be decorated with Venetian masts bearing the Ethiopian colors, triumphal arches and electric illuminations.

The new ruler, who was declared "King of Kings" a few days after the death of the Empress Zaoditu, daughter of Emperor Menelik, without any ceremony, owing to mourning, was at the time the Ras Tafari. He is the son of Ras Makonnen (who was a cousin of the Emperor Menelik and himself attended King Edward's coronation) and now ascends the throne under the title of Haile Sillassie I, meaning "Power of Trinity."

Missionary Rally Hears Dr. Gaines

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 24.—Addressing a sectional missionary rally here today, attended by 500 women from the Missionary Unions of the Albemarle, Augusta, Goshen, James River, Piedmont, Potomac, Shenandoah and Shiloh Associations, Dr. R. E. Gaines, president of the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist Convention, expressed the fear that Southern Baptists are in danger of losing their fervor for foreign missions. Women, he said, are prime movers and chief proponents of missionary education and know ten times as much about foreign missions as men.

Today's group meeting was presided over by Mrs. Howard C. Gilmer, of Pulaski, president of the State association, which includes more than 3,000 unions, with an enrollment of 70,000.

Among the speakers at the morning session were Mrs. J. C. Rogers, of Round Hill, superintendent of the Potomac Union; Mrs. O. W. Borden, of Front Royal, and Mrs. J. Carter Wright, president of the Alabama Union. Following group conferences this afternoon, the delegates visited Monticello and tonight heard an address by Dr. John Lake, missionary to the lepers of south China.

BAPTIST CHURCHES STAGING REVIVALS

Brethren and Full Gospel Tabernacle Also Wage Spiritual Drive.

ANOTHER ONE TO OPEN

This is the revival season of the year with the evangelical churches. Time was when the Baptists, Methodists and Presbyterians—(to name them in alphabetical order)—gave the devil a tussle every time they preached, and the revivals were a continuing thing. But that has changed with the changing times, and there are no Moodys or Sam Joneses nor even "Billy" Sundays moving about over the face of the land and making the sawdust trail a vital thing in the life of the Nation.

City churches, it would seem, have small time or patience for the old-time evangelistic meeting, and only the great Baptist denomination is making the revival a feature of its economy. Some of the smaller denominations, of course, adopt that method of building up their numbers, but the field among the larger communions is left to the deep water brethren.

In Washington, at the present moment, two Baptist churches are immersed in evangelistic drives and two smaller churches, the Church of the Brethren and the Full Gospel Tabernacle.

Lay Evangelist Preaches.

At the Fifth Baptist Church a lay evangelist, Mr. W. Carey Barker, of Virginia, is holding forth in a style that is attracting no end of attention in the Southwest section. His music director, W. Plunkett Martin, is making the singing quite a feature of the service.

It is said that Mr. Barker is proving to be one of the most interesting speakers the Fifth Baptist Church has had during the long leadership of the pastor, Dr. John E. Briggs. He has a very strong personality and speaks with much enthusiasm but is free from sensationalism. He appeals to the very best in a person and holds up Jesus Christ only as the savior of mankind. The speaker is not an ordained minister but a man of large business experience and a social leader. He has been a leader in the larger social affairs in Lynchburg, Va., for years. It is further said that Mr. Barker's culture and refinement and his naturel gifts and attainments are making him one of the most sought for religious speakers in the South. According to Dr. Briggs, the evangelist does not compromise but brings a great gospel message at each service.

A Pennsylvania evangelist, the Rev Charles H. Ashman, pastor of the First Brethren Church, of Johnstown, will open a series of evangelistic meetings Monday night at the First Brethren Church here, Twelfth and E streets southeast.

Meetings for Three Weeks.

"The meetings will continue for three weeks and will be marked by fervent gospel preaching, spirited singing and good fellowship," says the pastor, the Rev. Homer A. Kent.

For the first week Mr. Ashman's topics will be: Monday, "A Biblical Revival;" Tuesday, "The Leaven of the Pharisees;" Wednesday, "The Sharp Shears of Sin;" Thursday, "The Path That Leads Back to God;" Friday, "Axe Heads Made to Swim:" Sunday (morning), "Hearts Beneath the Microscope;" and (evening), "Weighed in the Balances."

The Texas evangelist, the Rev. Joe Jeffers, who has been setting the brush on fire at Temple Baptist Church, has changed his base of operations to a tent at the corner of Rhode Island avenue and Second street northwest.

"Many people from all sections of the city are hearing his stirring, fiery, soul-thrilling gospel messages," says Dr. Boorde, the pastor of Temple Church. "The evangelist is on fire for the Lord and the Lord is doing things out at the tent. Hearts are being turned from sin to praising God, from darkness to light, and many homes are being made happy by the entrance of God."

Speaks Over Radio.

Mr. Jeffers also conducts a daily radio evangelistic campaign over WJSV, from 12:45 to 1 p. m., when a sermon in song and preaching is given.

At the Thursday evening service Mr. Jeffers will preach on "The World's Greatest Tragedy," and will dramatize the death of Christ, using three crosses, one of which will be electrically lighted. On Friday a six-reel motion picture of the Oberammergau Passion Play will be given.

Large crowds have heard Evangelist Loren B. Staats the past week at the Full Gospel Tabernacle, North Capitol and K streets, and the services will continue nightly next week. His sermon, which has attracted wide attention, entitled "True Motherhood," will be given Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock. His subjects include: "The Last Hour of This Generation," "Why Does Not God Destroy Satan?" "Where Are the Dead?" "The Crushing of All Kingdoms by the Return of Christ," "The Last Hour Before the Flood," "Is the Antichrist at Hand?" "Is America Getting Better?" and "Expositions of Prophecy."

Rev. John C. Ball Returns to Pulpit

Church Has Increased Greatly Under His Long Pastorate.

The Rev. John Compton Ball, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, has returned to his pulpit after an absence of four months and begins his twenty-eighth year as pastor of this church.

He came from New Bethlehem, Pa., to Washington, September 1, 1903, and found a small church with 365 members and an income of $4,500 per year. Since that time the small building has been razed and a new building erected, covering three-fourths of the block between Fifth and Sixth streets on A street northeast, with an auditorium seating 1,400. The property value is $225,000 and the church membership has grown to 1,585, with the yearly income increased to $31,000.

The church organization is 52 years old. In the first 25 years of its history there were seven different pastors. In the last 27 years it has had but one.

During Dr. Ball's pastorate ten new Baptist churches have been formed in the district of Columbia, and Metropolitan has contributed members to every one. Pastor Ball has given the hand of fellowship to over 2,200 new members.

Guests to Fill Takoma Pulpit.

The Rev. William E. LaRue, pastor of Takoma Park Baptist Church, is ill, and his pulpit will be filled tomorrow by Dr. W. L. Darby, in the morning, and by the Rev. C. P. Ryland in the evening.

Calvary Church Men Proud of Services

Sign used by the Men's Committee of Calvary Methodist Church to draw in the Sunday night crowds.

Preaching and Singing Held Noteworthy Features.

The men's committee of the Calvary Methodist Church, on Columbia Road near Fifteenth street, is most optimistic in its belief that the people of Washington, particularly those living in the Mount Pleasant section, both need and want a Sunday evening service such as that now being offered by that church. A church brightly lighted welcomes the worshiper. A sermon such as was given last Sunday evening by Dr. Depp and which was reported in Monday's Post, fathers a resolve to hear another and similar sermons.

Songs of spirit and life and inspiration, sung under the leadership of Dr. H. M. Dudley, make one glad that he entered here. On a recent Sunday evening Dr. Depp made a confession to the congregation. "I confess," he said, "that I didn't know you could sing so well."

Here are the songs selected for the song service tomorrow evening—do they remind you of the church you used to attend, of how you enjoyed singing them then, and make you feel that you want to sing them again, and that you want your children to know and sing them? "The Light of the World Is Jesus;" "There Shall Be Showers of Blessing;" "I Am Thine, O Lord;" "Never Give Up;" "Wonderful Words of Life."

The laymen assisting in the service this Sunday evening are Mr. Edwin Dice, who will offer the prayer; Judge J. W. Thompson, who will read the scripture and Mr. E. M. Hall, who will make the announcements.

Dr. Depp's evening subject is, "The School of Sneers," and a special cello solo will be rendered by J. S. Zebley.

Have you seen that sign in front of Calvary Church? "Happy Sunday Evenings — Brief sermon, special music, live song service. Come sing with us!" And those Calvary folks mean just what they say.

These services are in charge of the men's committee of which Mr. William B. Wells is president. Mr. L. J. Johnston is chairman of the special committee having charge of the programs.

UNION MISSION NEAR HALF-CENTURY MARK

BIG MEETING TOMORROW

In four more years Central Union Mission will be half a century old. To celebrate its approaching birthday anniversary, rescue workers from all over the country have assembled in Washington, and a number of them will speak from the pulpits of prominent churches Sunday.

As part of the celebration there will be a mass meeting at Calvary Baptist Church tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock, which will be addressed by Homer Rodeheaver.

A banquet will be given tonight at the Raleigh Hotel at which the board of directors of the Central Union Mission will celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Bennett's taking charge of this important religious work.

One of the prominent men attending the celebration is the Rev. H. H. Hadley, of Calvary Mission, New York City, who will preach Sunday at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church. Mr. Hadley's father was for many years head of the Water Street Mission in New York, and was himself one of the men rescued by the celebrated Jerry McAuley, who founded the mission.

Another of these noted rescue workers, T. A. Murphy, superintendent of the Syracuse Rescue Mission, will preach from the pulpit of Temple Baptist Church tomorrow morning.

Homer Rodeheaver, who was "Billy" Sunday's song leader in his evangelistic campaigns, will speak from the pulpit of the First Congregational Church in the interest of this work. He will probably have his well-known trombone with him, and play for the congregation.

Dr. John Morley, of the West Side Mission, of New York City, will be the guest speaker at Central Presbyterian Church Sunday evening, and will speak on rescue work in a great city. In the morning Dr. Morley will speak at Georgetown Lutheran Church.

Dr. Hand Will Preach At Cooperative Service

The Protestant churches of Chevy Chase are continuing their experiment with the cooperative service which is held every Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

Tomorrow evening Dr. J. Phelps Hand, of the Wesley M. E. Church, will preach the sermon, and the meeting will be held in the Baptist Church on Western avenue west of Chevy Chase Circle. Five Protestant churches are working together in this practical adventure of good will.

DR. RIVES TO TALK ABOUT CARTWRIGHT

Circuit Rider's Life Will Be Sketched by Pastor of Methodist Church.

DEBATED WITH LINCOLN

Peter Cartwright was one of the greatest of the Methodist circuit riders. He was a native of Amherst County, Va., grew up in Tennessee, became a preacher in Kentucky, preached all over the South and eventually went to Illinois to get away from slavery. In that State he was not only a hot gospeller for the Lord, but he was a politician who never missed a Democratic convention.

When Lincoln ran for Congress Peter Cartwright was his opponent, and it is said by tradition that he made the fur fly so thick and fast that Lincoln never would meet him in joint debate. One of the strangest facts in history is that there are no memorials of that controversy in existence, though every other incident in Lincoln's life is well and plentifully buttressed with documents of all sorts. Peter Cartwright even left out of his famous and unique autobiography all mention of it, and does not even name Lincoln's name, though they lived in the same town for a generation.

In the historic general conference of 1840, when the slavery issue got very hot, Peter Cartwright met with the Southern ministers and stood with them in their efforts to prevent any action on that question. Four years later he was the leader of the movement that eventually brought about the division in the church.

He favored gradual emancipation of the slaves and hated an Abolitionist like he did a Whig and a Republican.

In many ways he was a remarkable man. If you want to hear more about him, go to Francis Asbury Methodist Church Thursday evening. Dr. Rives, the pastor, is going to use him as a text for that service.

Churches Will Launch Vesper Service Series

Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock the Church of the Covenant and the First Presbyterian Church will inaugurate a series of vesper services, at which time Dr. Newton Preston Patterson, the associate minister, will begin a series of special sermons.

The general subject of these sermons will be "Christ, the Fulfillment of Promise," and the subjects at each service will be: November 2, "The Promise to the Race:" November 9, "The Promise to the Nation;" November 16, "The Promise to the Tribe;" November 23, "The Promise to the Family;" November 30, "The Promise to the Individual;" December 7, "The Birthplace of Christ;" December 14, "The Annunciation and Advent."

GOOD NEWS ON THE GO.

ONE of the most interesting facts about the Good News of Jesus is its irresistible tendency toward transmission. It is ever on the go. Scientists have vainly sought to discover perpetual motion in the material realm. Christianity is perpetual motion in the spiritual sphere.

Nothing can stop this Good News. History records the efforts of empires to stop it by violence. It has faced the withering finger of time and the deadly tolerance of the indifferent. That which slows and silences other movements among men has but emphasized the divine dynamic of the Good News of Jesus. It is on the go today as never before. Its blessed power to transform our weak and unsatisfying lives into lives of strength and joyous service has broken through every barrier of age and sex and nationality and race. It is the power of God to every one that believeth, and as soon as he believes, it leaps through his transformed life to other needy lives. It is not only perpetual motion—it is perpetually multiplied motion.

The Good News of Jesus is on the go. The forces of evil are strong, their allies many within each of our hearts, but their defeat is sure. As well might the night defy the rising sun.

The Good News of Jesus is on the go in our hearts. Our bodies will grow weaker with the years, but our joy in transmitting this transforming news to others through our lips, and eyes, and lives, and the very memory that we once lived and He lived in us, shall grow stronger till the perfect day.

A. T. BEANE DEVOTED TO HIS CHURCH AT 90

Grand Old Member of First Congregational Called One of Seven Wonders.

NATIVE OF NEW ENGLAND

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE.

Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, minister of the First Congregational Church, has a young man in his congregation, A. T. Beane, whom he designates: "One of the seven wonders." When he speaks of Mr. Beane's devotion to the church and his activities in it, the minister exhausts the vocabulary of eloquence and the litany of comparison. It seems that every time there is a service of any sort, or a social gathering of any kind at the church, there the familiar figure of Mr. Beane is to be seen.

This would not be strange if Mr. Beane were a very young man, but he has reached the rather mature age of 90. "I am told I was born in 1840," he says with a quiet twinkle in his eye. That was the year that "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too" were elected; it was 21 years before Fort Sumter was fired on and Abraham Lincoln inaugurated President. If one cared to go into the history of his native New England of that far-off day, one could easily find many important events synchronizing with Mr. Beane's birth.

His family, New Hampshire folks, were old-fashioned Methodists, and even before he was 7 years of age he was carried to Sunday school and the habit of church-going then became fixed on him. His father was a farmer and those stern old New England farmers took their religion as they did their politics, very seriously. They formed their habits early and seldom broke away from them.

Old Singing School.

Mr. Beane joined the Methodist people when he was 22, and he was 30 before he knew there was any other church. Dear old Bishop Asbury, whose statue is one of the show places of Washington, in his quaint diary says that he found New England a rather sterile soil for propagating the peculiar doctrine of Father Wesley. But this can be said for them, once it took root it has had a stubborn growth and has not been easily uprooted.

One of the early manifestations of Methodism in the rural regions was the old-fashioned singing school. Few of the readers of this writing probably ever heard of such a school, and still fewer ever attended one. I cherish memories of one and of its aged singing master which I attended in a small town where my father was pastor. I even recall the singing master's name, Griff Organ, and have a vivid picture of the old fellow standing in front of his school with a tuning fork in his hand, striking it on his knee and then emitting a series of notes than ran, "Sol, fa, me, re, do," a sort of rising inflection.

Last of Singing Masters.

When the small organ pushed its way into the Methodist chapels it met with much opposition, from none more than Griff Organ and his tribe. One notable Sunday afternoon my father took me to a singing school where the organ was first used. Old Griff came in and sniffed the air like Job's warhorse. When the new singing master stood up with his wand, and the little parlor organ began to whine out its tune, old Griff, who was seated in the back of the church, spoke out loud: "What the devil is he doing now?"

And then he got up and, striking his tuning fork on his knee, he gave forth his five notes and said: "That is the way to h'ist a tune."

This story would have no appropriateness if Mr. Beane were not the last of those old singing masters. He began it, he told me, when he was 17, and he kept it up until he went to New York to live in 1887. It must have been quite a revelation to cultured Boston when he went there in 1884 and began to conduct singing schools in the Methodist chapels in the old-time manner. New York was too sophisticated to stand for that, and he had sense enough not to undertake it. Some real bright theatrical manager would make a great hit if he could resuscitate one of those old singing schools.

Photographer and Painter.

In speaking of his experiences as a music teacher, the experience which I have just been outlining, Mr. Beane sighs as a says: "I could not compete with the public schools. When they put music in their course of study they put an end to the singing school."

The textbook he used was called "The Harp of Zion." Not many of those old books are to be found outside of the old farm homes or some of the larger libraries of the country.

By trade Mr. Beane is a photographer and a painter. He learned this business while working on his father's farm, and has pursued it in New Hampshire, Vermont, Boston, New York and Chicago. His last active work was done at Oak Park, Ill. From that place he came to Washington to spend the evening of his long and active life.

Love for Sister.

There is one romance in the life of this old bachelor that is most beautiful, and that is the love he bore his old maid school teacher sister. After teaching for 35 years in the Central High School of Detroit she retired and came to Washington, where she had another sister living and bought a home on Rock Creek Church road. She and Mr. Beane had been so devoted to each other that they had made an agreement to retire together and spend their remaining years under the same roof. So on coming here she wrote her brother, he sold out his business and came on in 1917 to live with her. The sister lived four years after their reunion and then departed this life. Since which time Mr. Beane has lived in the little home almost alone. His other sister is in the next block from him.

On coming here he began to go to the First Congregational Church. Dr. J. B. Gordon was the pastor then. "He was an exceedingly hard man to get away from," Mr. Beane said, and so he kept on attending all of the services there until Dr. Pierce came, when he united with the Congregationalists by letter from the Oak Park Methodist Church.

"Why do you at your time of life go to all of the services of the church day and night?" I asked him.

Enjoys Young Folks.

"Force of habit largely," he replied. And then his clear old eyes twinkled like stars as he went on: "I don't like to break my record of constant church attendance."

He wound up a very pleasant interview by stating that there was nothing unusual in his church life. It has been the most satisfying part of his daily living, and from it he has derived a spiritual thrill that comes from no other thing.

"But why do you attend all the young people's meetings and the social affairs of the church?" I asked him.

"I have always enjoyed the society of young people, and I hope I never live so long that I will not care for the association and companionship of people generally."

Good Man and True.

When you understand that this is a typical New England Yankee talking, you wonder at the humor and the friendliness and the warmheartedness of the man. But, then, he is a most unusual person, even if he is quiet.

One of his friends in the church wrote the Church Page: "Mr. Beane, in addition to his benign presence, always produces at the opportune moment a crisp dollar bill, and although his sight is failing, he never fails to see the collection plate."

A hit, a palpable hit!

"And all of this faithfulness despite the fact that he is very deaf and hears scarcely any of the service," the letter goes on.

ARCHDIOCESE GIVES MISSIONS $197,010

CATHOLIC FETE PLANNED

The archdiocese of Baltimore of the Catholic Church gave a total sum of $197,010.11 to the cause of missions for the fiscal year ending with this month, according to the final report as just published. In his report to Archbishop Michael J. Curley the Rev. Louis C. Vaeth, archdiocesan director of the Home and Foreign Missions Society for the Propagation of the Faith, says:

"The publication of the sixth annual report of the Home and Foreign Mission Society for the Propagation of the Faith should cause the heart of every Catholic of the archdiocese to dilate with spiritual happiness and justified pride.

"Despite the recognized universal financial depression of the Nation; despite the heavy monetary burdens placed on the willing shoulders of clergy, religious and laity by the progressive program of the Archdiocese which have been borne with admirable patience and noble generosity, the contributions to the general Mission Cause for the fiscal year from October, 1929, to October, 1930, total the gratifying sum of $197,010.11."

In the tabulated report it is shown that Washington parishes gave a grand total of $25,851.58 to this fund; Washington parochial schools gave $2,234.63; and Washington institutions gave $3,773.86. Of the parishes giving over $1,000 the following are named: Church of the Nativity, $1,530.59; St. Gabriel's, $3,212.56; Holy Comforter, $1,550.07; Holy Name, $1,565.99; St. Matthews', $2,580.88; St. Patrick's, $1,538.40; St. Peter's, $2,387.74; and Shrine of the Sacred Heart, $1,901.63.

This report does not account for sums collected by various Missionary Societies and sent to the diocesan office, which, if added in, would largely increase the sum total.

Holy Name Society.

A public manifestation of faith, of love and reverence for the Holy Name of Christ, is planned by the Washington Section of the Baltimore Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies at St. Peter's Church, Second and C streets southeast, tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock, Feast of Christ the King.

Announcement of the public rally, in which, it is expected, more than 5,000 Catholic men will join, together with their families, was made by Caesar L. Aiello, president of the local Holy Name Union.

"The rally tomorrow evening," Mr. Aiello stated, "is expected to be the greatest gathering of Holy Name men ever held in any local church. We seek to make Christ better known and better loved by these public manifestations of faith. Never was there a time when a profession of faith in God is needed as much as it is today."

Lack of belief in Christ, immorality, divorce and kindred evils, President Aiello said, had come in the wake of irreligion. It was the mission of the Holy Name man, he continued, to bring the name of Christ to his fellow man in such manifestations of faith as the rally was designed to be.

The sermon will be preached by the Right Rev. Mgr. Eugene J. Connelly, LL. D., pastor of St. Peter's Church.

Retreat House for Women.

The Washington Retreat House for Women will be formally opened on Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., Auxiliary Bishop, of Baltimore, officiating. Bishop McNamara will preach the opening sermon and give the solemn benediction at the close of the exercises.

Invitations have been extended for members of the communities associated with the Catholic University and to the Catholic women of Washington. The young ladies of Trinity College have also been invited to attend.

Week-end retreats for women will be featured at the new Retreat Home, which is being conducted by the Sisters of the Atonement, with Sister Amelia as superior. It is located on Harwood road northeast adjacent to the Soldiers' Home and Catholic University.

The Sodality Union of Washington will sponsor retreats throughout the coming year. The Rev. Joseph V. Buckley, pastor of St. Francis Xavier's Church, has been appointed by Archbishop Curley in charge of retreats for women. Accommodations can be made for 40 women each week-end. Retreat masters will be selected for each retreat. The first retreat will take place on Friday, November 7, and will conclude on Sunday following.

Reformation Day Will Be Observed

Problems of Protestant Churches in Europe to Be Discussed.

The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church has requested that Reformation Day be observed next Sunday by all of the churches. This Reformation Sunday is an annual observance and at this time the problems and needs of the Protestant churches of Europe are brought to the special attention of the church.

The Southern Presbyterian Church unites with other churches in the effort to maintain the Church of the Refofmed Faith in Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Italy, Poland, Roumania and Russia. Many of these churches were seriously impoverished by the war, and Protestant pastors and congregations have suffered greatly.

It has been necessary for the churches in his country to contribute liberally to the support of the churches in Europe, in order that these individual congregations might be maintained, and that schools and orphanages might be kept open. The amount asked of the Southern Presbyterian Church for this work is $10,000.

On Sunday morning Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, will preach a sermon on the "Significance of the Reformation, and its Contribution to America."

Dr. Sizoo to Lecture On Past in California

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, minister of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will lecture Sunday night on "California, the Portals of the Past."

CORNER STONE RITES WILL BE HELD TODAY

PASTOR WILL PRESIDE

Presbyterians of Washington, and the Masonic fraternity, too, will lay the corner stone of the new Western Presbyterian Church, on H street between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets northwest, this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The pastor, the Rev. J. H. Dunham, will preside, assisted by the members of presbytery, and the corner stone will be laid by the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia.

James A. West, grand master, will lay the corner stone, assisted by members of the grand lodge. The address will be delivered by Dr. John C. Palmer, grand chaplain of the grand lodge and minister of Washington Heights Presbyterian Church.

When completed, this new church will be one of the most beautiful and most modern of the newer ecclesiastical structures in the city. It will be English Gothic architecture and will be built of stone quarried in Washington. The auditorium, of the clear-story type, will have a seating capacity of 600.

The Sunday school has been departmentalized. Among its features is a chapel, with a fireplace and a kitchenette. It will also house the church office, the pastor's study, and the ladies' parlors. Clubrooms for men and women, Boy Scout rooms, a large social hall, French doors leading from the social hall to an open court, a dining room, a service room, a completely furnished kitchen, stage and dressing rooms, concealed radiators, and direct lighting complete the equipment.

This church is one of the oldest and most historic in Washington. It goes back 75 years in time, and was the official church when Franklin Pierce was President. Members of his Cabinet, leading members of Congress and other prominent men in the Government were pew holders there. Jefferson Davis, who lived nearby, contributed to the original building fund. He also had a part in the building of the Church of the Epiphany, where he was a pew holder.

During the Secession War the church was turned over to the Government and used as a military hospital. In its belfry long hung a bell that was cast in an English foundry and in 1872 cost $1,000. It will go in the belfry of the new church.

Dr. Dunham has been pastor of this church for 21 years. During the World War he was an overseas chaplain.

The new church will cost $200,000.

Training School Will Be Started

A Standard Training School will be conducted on six Monday evenings, beginning November 3, under the auspices of the committee on Christian education of the presbytery of Washington. The sessions will be held in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The Rev. R. Paul Schearer, of the Takoma Park church, is chairman of the committee, and the Rev. George Culbertson, associate pastor of the New York avenue church, is chairman of the subcommittee on Sunday schools and teacher training. Mr. Culbertson is dean of the school. The Rev. J. R. Duffield, field secretary for Christian education, and the Sunday School Workers Association of the presbytery, Mr. Charles C. Haig, president, are cooperating with the committee.

The school has been conducted twice a year for four years. This term begins a three-year program of training for workers in Sunday school, Young People's societies and other organizations of the church.

Six courses are offered—"Study of the Pupil," taught by Prof. William Myers; "Old Testament," taught by Miss Mabel N. Thurston; "A Study of Early Childhood" (beginners), taught by Miss Gertrude Niemeyer; "Junior Materials and Methods," taught by Mrs. H. D. Kizer; "Social and Recreational Leadership," taught by Miss Ruby Neal, and "Sex Education and Child Guidance," taught by Mrs. F. B. Croxton, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society of the District of Columbia.

Children of Church To Entertain Parents

As a rule it is the old folks who pay the piper, but at Georgetown Presbyterian Church Wednesday evening the young folks will not only pay the piper, they will be the piper. The purpose is to give a supper to which will be invited the parents of the children in that church.

When the dishes are cleared away and washed and put in the racks, Mrs. Birnie will give an illustrated lecture on "The Waldenses."

"Seven Eyes" Again Aid Campaign of B. Y. P. U.

With the opening of the B. Y. P. U. federation efficiency campaign next month, the "Seven Eyes" will again be on the job. Frank Spencer, vice president of the Federation announced at the monthly meeting Tuesday night, in the Petworth Baptist Church, Seventh and Randolph streets northwest, that the popular visitation organization will be continued this year.

The organization was started by Z. C. Hodges, former vice president, and it proved a popular innovation. Frank Spencer thinks it will be even more popular this year because girls are being added to its membership.

Luther Place Church Gains Are Continued

The growth in membership that is being accomplished at Luther Place Memorial Church, under the pastorate of Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen is also being reflected in the auxiliaries of the church. CANNON, ACCUSERS MEET IN RICHMOND

Questions of Procedure in Charges Against Cleric Are Settled.

PRELATE'S TRIP HURRIED

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The Times-Dispatch says all questions of procedure in the charges brought against Bishop James Cannon, jr., by four traveling elders of the Southern Methodist Church were settled at a conference between Bishop Cannon and the elders here yesterday. Previously, when the bishop was first informed of the charges, he declared his accusers had not acted in accordance with the prescribed church procedure.

The paper says yesterday's conference resulted in a decision that the charges, yet undisclosed, were properly drawn and that the investigation will proceed.

The paper also says the appointment by Bishop William N. Ainsworth of a committee to investigate the charges and decide whether an indictment should be returned against Bishop Cannon to be tried by the Methodist General Conference in 1934 is expected shortly.

The four elders who filed the charges, Dr. J. T. Mastin and Dr. Costen J. Harrell, of Richmond; Dr. I. P. Martin, of Abingdon, Va., and Dr. Forest J. Prettyman, of Baltimore, met Bishop Cannon yesterday in a previously unannounced conference. The bishop returned to Washington last night.

The personnel of the investigating committee has not been announced by Bishop Ainsworth and the nature of the charges has never been divulged. Should the committee recommend a church trial, Bishop Cannon would be suspended pending a trial before the general conference of the church.

HOME FIRED UPON IN DANVILLE AREA

MILLTOWN MAN SOUGHT

Danville, Va., Oct. 24.—A new outrage perpetrated at the home of a nonunion textile worker living in North Carolina marked the local labor stalemate today. Roy Conner, who lives just across the State line, was visited by three automobiles, occupants of which fired a broadside from shotguns into his house, blowing out the front windows and sprinkling liberally the interior of his dwelling with shot. The Conners and their sleeping children were unharmed. Sheriff Yancey Gatewood, who made personal investigation, found seven empty shotgun shells in the yard.

The police admitted they were looking for Eugene Hardy, of Schoolfield, the mill village, in connection with the case, Conner telling the authorities that Hardy followed him home a few nights ago and made threats premised on his continuing working in the mills. If arrests are made trials will take place in Yanceyville, seat of Caswell County, N. C. City and county authorities were engaged in an academic discussion today about the trial of six warrants charging intimidation and involving twelve persons at Schoolfield. They were brought to the city court for trial, the magistrate at Schoolfield expressing the desire to be relieved of them. The city magistrate passed all of them by pending a determination of the question of jurisdiction.

The picket lines remained normal today and the number of persons entering the plants was unchanged.

William Murdock, of New Bedford, Mass., claiming to be the national secretary of the National Textile Workers Union, was given a hearing under a deportation proceeding before Arthur J. Odeneal, of Norfolk, deputy immigration inspector, this afternoon. The hearing took place at police headquarters.

Murdock was asked many questions bearing on Communistic activities, but he freely availed himself of the privilege of answering no questions. He did admit, however, that he had distributed in Danville dodgers alleged to bear incendiary statements. A stenographic record was taken of the proceedings and a decision would be rendered, Odeneal said, in Washington. The Government officer, however, expressed the belief before leaving that Murdock is a naturalized American.

The company states that between January 7 and February 19 the two women occupied a suite and ran up a bill totaling $820 which never was paid. The hotel held the baggage and now seeks to sell it in order to cover part of the account. Attorney Leon Katz appears for the company.

FINLEY CITES VALUE OF SMALL COLLEGE

JUBILEE FETE GOES ON

Ashland, Va., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Judged by their products of great men with great minds, the small college is superior to the larger, Dr. John H. Finley, editorial writer of the New York Times, said today in an address at the centennial celebration of Randolph-Macon College.

Speaking before a large gathering of alumni, delegates and friends of the school, Dr. Finley related the important contribution the small college, as typified by Randolph-Macon and similar institutions, has made to American education.

Dr. Finley said that a definite effort should be made to keep the small college an institution for stressing fundamentals of education, rather than using its money to increase physical plants and enrollment. He paid tribute to the personality and scholarship of President R. E. Blackwell, of Randolph-Macon, who is celebrating his fifty-fourth year as head of the college in connection with its centennial.

An academic procession began today's program of the centennial, following exercises and a banquet yesterday. Included in the procession were President Blackwell, Dean Hall Canter, Gov. Pollard, Senator Claude Swanson, Representative Patrick Henry Drewry and more than 100 college presidents' delegates and representatives of learned societies.

President Blackwell presided over the morning session, at which the invocation was offered by the Right Rev. John Newton McCormick, Bishop of Western Michigan.

THE OVERTURN IN BRAZIL.

The defection of army and navy officers in Rio de Janeiro resulted yesterday in the resignation of President Washington Luis and the assumption of power by a provisional government composed of a military junta. A proclamation issued by the junta calls upon the federals and rebels to cease fighting. Dr. Julio Prestes, president-elect, who was to have been inaugurated on November 15, is reported to have quit the field. If the plans of the junta should prevail the armed forces will retire and a permanent government will be established.

The prime cause of the revolution is said to have been the dissatisfaction resulting from the ascendancy of the metropolitan districts, which are alleged to have excluded the rural populations from participation in the government. Getulio Vargas, candidate of the Liberal party, added the charge that Dr. Prestes' election had been obtained by fraud.

Although the junta that forced President Luis to resign declares that it is inspired by "pure patriotism," the fact remains that a constitutional government has been overthrown by violence. It is hardly to be expected that a permanent government can now be established without further disorder. Presumably the strong man of the situation will be Getulio Vargas, who will claim the presidency. Dr. Prestes' majority of 400,000 votes over Vargas seems to preclude the idea that the recent election was so fraudulent as to thwart the will of the people.

By proclamation on October 22 President Hoover took cognizance of the fact that domestic violence in Brazil might be promoted by the use of arms and munitions procured from the United States, and he put into effect an embargo upon the shipment of war material to the revolutionists. This action was in accordance with law and custom, and it can not be properly construed as an intrusion into Brazilian affairs by the United States. Doubtless the provisional government of Brazil will soon ask for recognition by the United States. The President's decision on that question will depend upon the facts of the situation. Recognition was extended to the provisional governments of Bolivia and Peru when it appeared that they were supported by the people and were in a position to maintain order and discharge international obligations. The same rule no doubt will be applied to Brazil.

Several weeks probably will elapse before the Brazilian situation can be cleared up. Powerful political parties are in collision. The army and naval forces at present in control may fall out before a new government can be established upon a constitutional basis. The Brazilian people are predisposed to peace, however, and may be depended upon to work out their own salvation. The United States could easily make a mistake by premature recognition of an unstable regime for the sake of encouraging an early return to peace.

HIGH NEWSPAPER STANDARDS.

The New Republic concludes in its current issue, with an article entitled "Violation of Newspaper Codes," publication of a series of articles on the subject "News and the Newspaper," based on a survey made by Hornell Hart, Susan M. Kingsbury and Romayne Rowe. "A most important finding of the survey," say those who made it, "has been that, in the case of the newspapers, no sweeping generalizations are possible." An attempt was made, however, to classify American newspapers according to the prominence they give to news of various classificatons as, for example, "foreign sensational," "public crime and morals," "horror-danger," "public violence," "money-sensational," "sex," &c., and by the restrictions they impose on advertisers. By means of what is called a "spectrum of news interest" and various indexes, "an objective appraisal of certain classes of newspapers, roughly representative of the variances among them all" is attempted.

The study is concluded with the following paragraph: "What can be said at the present time, with scientifically grounded assurance, is this: Though the ethical code of journalistic behavior is being violated constantly, both in the selection of news and in distortion of facts presented, though many newspapers present only matter designed for the most sensational appeal and others offer news so colored as to blind the reader to all but one side—the newspaper-owner's side—of the case, there is nevertheless a large group of still other newspapers, distinguished for their honesty and uprightness of their standards, which are doing their best to adhere to the traditional ideals of American journalism."

The Washington Post is proud, indeed, that it is included with the New York Times, the New York Herald Tribune, the Boston Transcript and the New York World in the New Republic's list of the "five papers, particularly, which by our measurements stand out above the rest."

"BUY NOW."

In a final effort to lift the business depression the Washington Chamber of Commerce has launched a "Buy Now for Prosperity" campaign. The movement is analogous to drives that have been organized in other cities with considerable success. Several Philadelphia firms have reported large increases in business since the "Buy Now" campaign was inaugurated in that city. The movement seems to be spreading throughout the country.

Virtually every distinguished business leader has indorsed the theory underlying this campaign. No one has a doubt of the future prosperity of America. When the representatives of the greatest industries in the country met at Chicago this week they frankly admitted that business was in a serious slump, but there was no note of anything but confidence in an early recovery and continued prosperity.

The advice to "Buy Now" is sound. At the beginning of the depression goods were being manufactured faster than people were able to purchase them with their limited incomes. That situation no longer exists. Consumption is running ahead of production and the industrial machinery of the country must soon be speeded up to avoid a shortage. Merchants must soon begin to replenish stocks which they have allowed to diminish beyond the normal point. Some permanent adjustments may be made as a result of the slump, but there is every indication that the country will soon be producing and consuming more than ever before.

The public, with the exception of the unemployed, has money for immediate buying, and only awaits the complete return of confidence before putting money into circulation. Savings accounts have gained more than $200,000,000 within the last year. There could be no better evidence of the country's solvency and buying capacity. During the period of the depression there has been an enormous accumulation of capital. It should be released for normal activities and normal needs.

One other factor that lends force to the "Buy Now" campaign is the prevailing low prices. A steady decline in prices has been in progress for nearly a year. Salaries, for the most part, have been maintained at their former level, which means that the average family is able to purchase more now than it could a year ago. Adding this increase in purchasing power to the savings that have been stored away, it is evident that restored confidence will mean an immediate expansion of business.

The country has all the capacity, intelligence, capital and efficient labor that it had before the slump. The potential demand for goods is greater, because of the slack pace of production during the last year. The public can make a great contribution toward restoration of prosperity by making the usual necessary purchases of goods.

THE ROYAL WEDDING.

Royal weddings are always occasions for widespread rejoicing. The ceremony in which Princess Giovanna, daughter of King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, today will become the bride of King Boris III of Bulgaria, will be no exception. The people of Italy and Bulgaria will experience vicariously the romance of the royal couple.

The religious obstacle to the marriage was overcome by a special dispensation from Pope Pius and by arrangement for a second ceremony in Sofia according to the rites of the Eastern Orthodox Church. The wedding today takes place in the little village of Assisi, in a beautiful setting.

King Boris has been uneasy in his role of bachelor monarch. For years he has given attention to the problem of inviting a queen to share the Bulgarian throne. But his true romance did not develop until he met the charming Italian princess, then only 18, four years ago. The people of Bulgaria will be happy to welcome their queen, and Italy will be proud to see King Victor Emmanuel's daughter sharing a throne with Boris III. As a result of the romance the two peoples will doubtless find the ties of good will strengthened.

SUBSIDIZING COLLEGE ATHLETES.

Until comparatively recently it was the common practice of universities and colleges to subsidize athletes by giving them free tuition, board and lodging and, sometimes, by directly or indirectly paying them for their services. Subsidization of college athletes came to be a national disgrace. In the last few years, however, the colleges and universities have generally cleaned house. Today the public believes that subsidization, proselyting, &c., have been outlawed. The football scandal that has arisen at George Washington University will be looked upon as a flareback to a former day. If, however, it results in clarifying once and for all the relationship that should exist between the university and the athlete, it will have served its purpose.

Six members of George Washington's freshman football squad this week demanded that they be given free tuition, board and lodging by the university and that they be permitted to keep for themselves the money earned in jobs secured for them by the athletic department. It has been the practice of the department to assist football players in obtaining work, the proceeds from which were appropriated to pay for tuition, board and lodging. The demand was not granted; the students were expelled from the football squad.

Whether or not it is quite the right thing for a university to single out athletes and help them get jobs is a question that will arise as a result of this incident. The practice is common, however, and if the only return obtained by the student is tuition, board and lodging, it is not wholly indefensible. But the fact that young men still look upon their athletic ability as having a market value is disquieting. The statement of one of the expelled students is particularly so. "We came here on scholarships," he said, "with the understanding that if we played football the university would take care of us. It's always understood that if you go away to play football you will be well taken care of. * * * Most of us will get jobs on ships until another football season rolls around because we can't catch on at any other college—certainly not this year."

George Washington University made no promises to these boys that they would be "well taken care of," but the boys evidently came to the university laboring under that impression. The sooner such impressions are removed the better.

THE LESSON OF RUBBER

From the Manitoba Free Press.

Following conferences between the Malay Federated States and the Dutch East Indies, the two most important rubber-planting regions in the world, it is announced that no cooperation looking toward restriction of production can be expected. Sir Cecil Clementi, the British Governor of Malaya, states officially that economic law must work out the problem alone, and with raw rubber now selling below 8 cents a pound it may be expected that severe economies will be effected.

Sir Eric Geddes, chairman of Dunlop Rubber, one of the big tire producers of Great Britain, in a circular to shareholders points out the effects of the last restriction scheme. This plan was successful in raising the price of rubber, but as it included only the British-controlled plantations, it gave Dutch-controlled planters in Java and elsewhere a heaven-sent opportunity to plant more trees. Figures of the acreage before and after the restriction scheme were as follows:

	Malaya.	Dutch East Indies.

As the Times points out, restriction at this time would only mean that "the British rubber industry would gradually fall into decay for the benefit of nonrestricting countries." This is obvious, since the figures show that the last scheme induced an increase of a million acres in Dutch plantations, while the artificial prices induced by the partial restriction broke sharply under the flood of new rubber.

Almost half the Dutch production is native-owned and the Dutch governor-general, in refusing to enter a restriction scheme, pointed out that his government was unwilling to apply compulsion toward the native population, that the native planters owned only a few trees each and were not impressed by any notion of the long term benefits of restriction, and that in any event lack of land registration would make effective restriction impossible.

The cheapness of native-grown rubber was emphasized by Sir Eric Geddes, who pointed out that the natives had no boards of directors, no heavy head office expenses, no rigid standard of living, and that, when prices are low they dispense with all labor and, with their families, tap the trees themselves. In all this, they had an advantage over the English-owned plantations.

He pointed out, however, that his company is able to produce rubber at 8 cents a pound, and hopes to reduce that cost to 6 cents. Commenting on this fact the Times points out that rigid rationalization will be necessary all over the Malayan plantations, and amalgamation and economy introduced in order that the British capital invested in the industry may not be completely lost.

A price of $1.15 a pound for rubber, such as existed in 1925 under restriction, the Times goes on, was utterly out of line with reason, and could not be expected to continue. All that the industry can do now is to get its costs down to the price of the product as grown by its competitors, and make no more mistakes comparable with that of hopelessly underestimating the ability of competitive producers to increase their output when prices soar to levels altogether out of line with production costs.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

SEEKING PERFECTION.

She loved him so, she could not bear
To see him do one foolish thing.
A careless act was pain to her,
A fault would set her shuddering
And scolding when she wished to weep
She thought that way his love to keep.

O'er trifles others noticed not
She grieved and fretted night and day.
Each tiny speck became a blot,
Each flaw a thing to rub away.
He took her censure for disdain
And never guessed 'twas born of pain.

"Nag! Nag!" he cried. "That's all you do,
My faults are all you ever see!
From such a scolding dame as you
I'll ask the courts to set me free!"
She lost him, but he doesn't know
It was because she loved him so.

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY dear Louise: Many times in your life you will wonder what is right and what is wrong. Perhaps you will know, deep in your heart, that the right way is the hard way; but the temptation to do wrong will be so great and will offer so many plausible arguments and excuses that your mind will be tricked and confused and you will need some one to guide you.

This, then, is to suggest a way out of your difficulties.

You have seen the rural part of America described in print as the "Bible belt," and you know that country people as a class take their religion much more seriously than city people.

Do you think that state of affairs something new? Well, it isn't.

Keep pegging away at the history you are so fond of and you will discover that all religions come out of the country.

The saviors and teachers spend their youth among people who plow or tend herds, and finish their training in the desert.

And in all lands and all ages the people who preserve the faith of their fathers and remain conscious of God's presence are country people.

It isn't because country people are morally or spiritually superior to city people. It is wholly a result of environment.

Those who live in the shadow of towering buildings and are dominated by the products of man's genius and ingenuity are unable to forget the greatness of man, while those who live close to the earth and see no majesty except that of mountains and stars are unable to forget the greatness of God.

That is the whole explanation.

And there you have the solution of problems that vex and trouble you.

Your mind may be confused and the thing that is wrong may seem to be right while you remain in town, but an hour alone under the stars or an hour spent on a sun-drenched hillside in the country will clear your mind as a summer shower clears the dust-laden air.

You needn't try to think or invite inspiration. Just remain quiet for an hour while earth and sky readjust your sense of values and teach you how small man is and how great God is.

You will make mistakes all your life, dear, but you won't make any big ones if your decisions are made out in the open where the shepherds saw the guiding star as they watched their flocks by night. Love,

DAD.

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Air Fighting.

Arkansas Gazette.

The scientists who said the next battle would be fought in the air were entirely right if they meant political battles.

New Political Machine Needed.

Indianapolis News.

The lie-detecting machine, which the University of Chicago is going to use on students, will be still more valuable if it can be made to work on candidates.

Democratic Promises.

Kasson (Minn.) Republican.

Being out of power, the Democrats (and in Minnesota the Farmer-Laborites), can promise to regulate the weather so there will be one rain a week during the summer months, to abolish the static in radio broadcasting, and to give higher prices to the farmers and cheaper prices to the consumers, and they can get away with it—so long as they remain out of power.

Politics Upside Down.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The official accounting of its disbursements to date bears out reports that the Democratic senatorial campaign committee is giving no aid to the party's candidate in Nebraska, Mr. Hitchcock, since it would prefer to see its insurgent ally, Senator Norris, reelected The Nye committee, headed by an insurgent, is continuing its efforts to help Mr. Norris' candidacy, and its chairman is now making a return visit to Nebraska in response to the senator's call.

The fact that Republicans in large numbers are reported to be supporting the Democratic candidate, while the Democrats are aiding the nominal Republican, Mr. Norris, who has only a technical right to the party designation, shows that the political situation in Nebraska is about as topsy-turvy as in Pennsylvania this year. And it is not without significance that from the family of Mr. Pinchot, whose right to be considered a loyal Republican is challenged by many members of the party, has gone a substantial check to the campaign fund of the Nebraska insurgent, whose antiadministration activities have so endeared him to the Democratic party in State and Nation.

Lame Ducks in Control.

Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Mr. Shouse's promise of Republican defeat this fall should not be hailed as an event heralding immediate political salvation or as affording means for quick retaliation against those who have ruled the country. A Democratic Congress elected this fall, thanks to an archaic provision of the Constitution, would not assume responsibility for the Government until thirteen months after its election. The Republican "lame ducks" still would sit in the seats of the mighty. A condition against which the people voted at the polls could not be corrected for another year and more, unless Mr. Hoover called Congress in special session and signed the remedial legislation it passed.

Party Loyalty Last.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

The extreme prohibitionists are neither Democrats nor Republicans. They are willing and anxious to act with the old parties as long as the old parties go the way of the prohibitionists on the liquor question. They subordinate all other issues to that of prohibition, and when the old parties refuse to do that the prohibitionists have no further use for them. They are merely running true to form in Illinois and New York.

And extreme wets are becoming more and more like extreme drys. They are wets before they are Democrats or Republicans.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Suggests That Government Employes Be Kept on Their Jobs and Others Put to Work.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see where the President called a meeting of his Cabinet officers in order to ascertain what can be done about the unemployment situation.

Not so long ago President Hoover called many of the big industrialists to the White House, asked them to keep their employes working, and told them that this was necessary for the country's sake. Among that group of men were some railroad presidents who promised to do just that. How well they kept their promise was seen when one of them reduced his road's office force 30 per cent. Others have done likewise, and conditions are now worse than they have ever been.

How can the President expect these big industrialists to do what the United States Government—except in the one instance of the Shipping Board—refuses itself to do? Right now, while the President is calling on his Cabinet officers to see what can be done about unemployment, every department of the Federal Government is obliged to cut down expenses. This of course means the loss of jobs by some of the Federal employes. It is generally believed, also, that when a clerk in the Postoffice Department resigns or retires, his job is not filled, although the mail service at this time is sorely in need of extra help. In some sections of this city, as probably also in other cities, the last mail collection is at 8 o'clock, while on Sundays there is only one collection and that at 6 o'clock.

Why should not the President practice what he himself preaches and come out with a strong statement to the effect that no competent Federal employe will lose his or her job, and that where necessary others will be taken on? UNEMPLOYED.

Expert Says Repeal of Vermin Bounty Law by Virginia Is a Set-Back to Wild Life Conservation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Both in your columns and in my addresses on wild life conservation I have stressed the fact of the great abundance of quail and other small game in Virginia as a result of thorough vermin eradication. While traveling over 45 counties in 1928, I watched carefully and saw but five hawks, and very few crows. In the year ending June 30, 1928, there were killed in Virginia 67,276 hawks, 11,693 owls, 58658 crows and 15,699 weasels. Even though vermin migrates it cannot accumulate in quantities to do much harm against such wholesale vermin destruction.

In Gloucester County, Virginia, where I originated the clean-up movement later adopted for the whole state, the National Amateur Field Trial Association released 72 covies of quail on two farms. Four hunters from Alexandria got the bag limit of quail in a few hours, and mostly on one hedge.

As I feel that many non-resident licenses have been purchased in Virginia because of my addresses the country over that vermin-eradication had been such a success there, it is only fair to add now that these flourishing conditions and abundance of small game no longer exist. For by repealing the vermin county law the Virginia Game Commission has brought back the scourge of vermin upon the State. Last fall it was hardly possible to find a quail in regions where it had been easy to get the limit in a few hours.

Government Could Increase the Number of Men Employed in Construction Work in Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I renew my suggestion that the Government increase the forces that are engaged in construction of public buildings in Washington. Much of this work is by contract, and Government officials can take refuge in the argument that they have no control over the number of men employed. Nevertheless, additional contracts could be let for the demolition of old buildings, the clearing of ground, and the erection of buildings. This would result in increase of employment by the contractors.

Some of the jobs are handled directly by the Government. There is slackness in this field. Many more men could be put to work. Why is there such long delay? ACTIVITY.

HOMO AMERICANUS.

Prof. Corrado Gini, of the University of Rome, has discovered a new kind of man, Homo Americanus, according to the New York World. There are two other kinds of men, it seems, Homo Orientalis, who works "just sufficiently to provide food and shelter for himself and his dependents," and Homo Europeus, "who up to the present regarded work as a means to an end and confined its exercise to the advantages and pleasures it obtained him, but always was ready to abandon it for intellectual joys when he felt his future was assured." But Homo Americanus, he says, "works for work's sake, just like an artist for art's sake."

And all we can say about his theory is that we agree with Le Temps, in Paris, which holds it is all wet. If Prof. Corrado Gini will find us any considerable number of Americans who like work any better than an Oriental likes it, or a European likes it, we shall give him a 14-carat emblem of the American Federation of Labor, free gratis, postage prepaid. And in point of fact the American does not work as hard as the Oriental or the European. Hours are shorter here, and the trend is to make them still shorter than they are now. The five-day week will come, just as the eight-hour day came. This may prove that it is easier to make a living here than in the Orient or in Europe, but it certainly does not prove that Homo Americanus likes work.

Why should he? He is human, like all other homines, and work has always been distasteful hominibus.

BUY-NOW CAMPAIGN STARTED IN CAPITAL

Chamber of Commerce Will Enlist Pastors' Aid for Prosperity.

SPECIAL MEETING HELD

"Buy now for Prosperity" is the slogan adopted yesterday by the Washington Chamber of Commerce for an immediate campaign to convince the public that the present business depression is due entirely to psychological conditions.

Aid of church officers and leaders in all denominations is to be sought at once by a newly created "prosperity committee," headed by George A. G. Wood, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., who proposed the campaign. Other members of the committee are Charles W. Darr, former president of the chamber; Martin A. Leese, Thomas P. Littlepage and Nicholas J. Whelan.

Addressing a special meeting of the board of directors of the chamber yesterday, Mr. Wood declared that business conditions basically are sound now and that the present depression is almost entirely a state of mind, so that the stage is all set for the return of prosperity.

Enlist Pastors' Aid.

Holding that the spiritual condition of the public's collective mind is the dominant factor in such a situation, Mr. Wood urged that the committee make its first step by calling upon the heads of the various religious denominations in Washington and explaining the situation to them with a view to enlisting their support and the aid of the pastors of their several churches to preach prosperity from their pulpits.

"Now is the time to buy," Mr. Woods said in part. "Money counts for more in terms of purchasing power now than it has in a long time past. But not only does the purchaser get more for his money now than he will if he waits until increased demand sends prices upward, but by buying now the public will stimulate production, relieving the unemployment situation and putting more money into circulation, with obviously beneficial results all around."

Col. William O. Tufts was appointed to the board of directors to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Henry E. Slinger, who retired from the board because of ill health.

Creates New Office.

On the motion of Mr. Darr, the board created the new office of assistant secretary, which was filled by appointment of Mrs. Marie C. Rogers, "who has been doing the work right along, but without the recognition her activities deserved."

The board reelected Dorsey W. Hyde, jr., secretary; W. McK. Stowell, treasurer, and Walter C. Balderston, general counsel.

The board meeting was followed by a meeting of the industrial exposition committee, of which Mr. Jose is chairman. Alfred L. Stern, director of the exposition, reported that despite the depression, every indication at present is that the show which will be held during the week of November 3 this year will exceed the record of 1929, when 100,000 persons attended the exposition.

Ready Ticket Sale.

Already, Mr. Stern said, more than 370,000 tickets to the 1930 exposition have been distributed, and merchants have reported that they will be able to use another 100,000. Isaac Gans, chairman of the exposition reception committee, reported that a large number of nationally prominent men and women have agreed to participate this year.

Department and committee assignments were announced by President Jose as follows:

PRESIDENT NOT TO SUMMON CONGRESS ON UNEMPLOYMENT

tive said, was needed to deal with unemployment.

"The sense of voluntary organization and community service in the American people has not vanished," he said. "The spirit of voluntary service has been strong enough to cope with the problem for the past year, and it will, I am confident, continue in full measure of the need."

The President said Col. Arthur Woods, relief director for the Cabinet committee on unemployment, already had received most gratifying evidence of the willingness of State and municipal officials, industrial leaders and welfare organizations throughout the country to cooperate.

"There is no doubt of the success of his organization," Mr. Hoover said.

As Col. Woods' two-day-old organization began to function the Chief Executive made it possible for 200,000 family heads to secure employment in the Postal Service during the Christmas holiday rush. He signed an executive order authorizing Postmaster General Brown to waive civil service qualifications for needy breadwinners.

As a result, about $6,000,000 will go to clothe, feed, and shelter destitute family groups. In addition, the Postoffice Department prepared to issue an order to give all overtime work to jobless substitutes. Thousands of persons, otherwise without income, will be benefited.

National unity in action and organization was asked by Col. Woods as he announced his plan of attack. A call to all agencies for information on the jobless has been sent out, along with an appeal to industry to furnish data regarding men that might be used.

As a move to simulate industry and create jobs, he said bond issues aggregating $450,000,000 would be voted on in a number of States and cities in November, which, if approved, would contribute greatly to alleviating the situation. There should be no departure, he said, from general policies of sound planning, financing and economic execution of public works.

Announcing the appointment of Fred C. Croxton, of Columbus, Ohio, as the first of possibly three regional directors to work with the States, Col. Woods said that apparently the Great Lakes States were the most seriously affected. Mr. Croxton is to work in the Middle West.

Mr. Croxton, he said, was largely responsible for the successful plan of reducing unemployment carried out in Ohio, where the governor and State officials provided maximum public work construction and assisted in finding employment in 88 industrial counties.

The Ohio idea, he continued, would be applicable to other States. Regional directors he expects to secure for voluntary service during a week-end visit to New York City will be asked to advocate it to governors of other States. He plans to leave Washington today and return Tuesday.

The American Federation of Labor is directing its efforts to getting opportunities for work more equally distributed among workers. William Green, president of the organization, said that in crises all that could be done was to distribute work as widely as possible. Shorter working hours were needed for labor, he said.

In discussing his campaign, Mr. Woods said there were two directions in which more intensive organization could work—through the Nation, States, municipalities and counties, and through the industries. He plans to cooperate with both.

Although he did not give a blanket recommendation to the soundness of each of the public building bond proposals to be voted on in November, Mr. Woods urged local leaders to study the issues carefully. If they were sound, he said, the leaders should urge upon the voters their passage.

Most of the issues, he continued, entailed the employment of labor, and would result in the stimulation of industry by increasing the buying power of the workers.

He listed the proposed bond issues as follows:

Arizona, highway, $10,000,000; California veterans' welfare, $20,000,000; Fresno, Calif., water system, $2,520,000; Fresno County, Calif., buildings, $750,000; Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, California, bridge, $35,000,000; Los Angeles Electric Lght & Power System, $13,300,000; Los Angeles, sewage disposal, $6,000,000; San Francisco, airport, $4,000,000.

Chinese Goes on Trial In Informer's Slaying

With his life at stake, Lee Din, a Chinese, yesterday went on trial in District Supreme Court on a charge of first-degree murder in connection with Washington's first alleged modern "gang" slaying. Din is on trial on a charge of having slain Lee King, alleged Chinese narcotic informer.

King was killed in June, 1929, and his body tossed out of an automobile in which he had been riding, according to police reports. Din's arrest followed a Nation-wide search. Assistant United States Attorney Walter M. Shea appears for the Government while the defendant is represented by Attorneys James A. O'Shea and John H. Burnett.

STOCKS SHOW GAIN ON LATE ANALYSES

LEADERS SEE REVIVAL

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Wall street, although grown cynical by a year of successive disappointments, pricked up its ears today as a prominent figure in the motors industry and several leading steel executives, presented carefully reasoned analyses indicating that the nadir of business depression had been reached, and that next year would see better times.

These analyses, coming on the anniversary of last autumn's "black Thursday," when a stock market convulsion of unprecedented violence gave warning of the necessity of drastic readjustments, served to awaken gloomy Wall street to the fact that all depressions eventually strike bottom.

John J. Raskob, director and former chairman of the finance committee of General Motors Co., issued a statement saying:

"The time for pessimism was eighteen months ago. Optimism should now be the order of the day."

Sees Motor Industry Revival.

He said a sharp revival in the motor industry might be expected in January. Wall street recalled that it was a year and a half ago that Mr. Raskob foresaw the necessity of extensive readjustments in the industry, particularly a correction of the overburdened dealer situation.

James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corp., stated at the semiannual meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute that if price cutting in the steel industry were curbed, it should be on its feet once more in 60 days. He declared that there was business enough for the steel industry to be operating at 70 to 75 per cent of capacity, as compared to between 50 and 55 per cent, but that the business had been killed by price cutting.

Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., said he did not expect the industry to show much in the way of improvement until after the turn of the year, but "we are going along on a level keel."

Charles M. Schwab, chairman of Bethlehem, and president of the institute, said in the opening address that the steel industry "will lead the march back to prosperity." Mr. Schwab predicted this new prosperity would excel all that has gone before.

Stock Market Buoyant.

The stock market displayed pronounced buoyance almost throughout the day, with a final brisk advance in the last hour. The bond market which has been under pressure along with stocks recently, also turned upward. Trading in stocks was in light volume, tractions totaling 2,763,000 shares, in contrast to 12,894,650 a year ago today. The price average of 90 representative stocks gained nearly 5 points, carrying it up to 140.9, compared with a recent low record of 134.2 and 204.5 a year ago today. Gains ran from $1 to $9 a share.

News of the apparent success of the revolution in Brazil caused brisk recovery in the prices of Brazilian securities, for a drawn-out struggle, with perhaps extensive loss of life and property damage, had been feared. This contributed to the improved tone of the securities markets. Coffee broke on the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange when the news was first published, but later recovered.

Stability Shown By Capital Firms

Census Figures Reveal 82 Per Cent Organized Prior to 1925.

Census reports released yesterday show that 82 per cent of all firms operating in the District in 1929 were organized prior to 1925, while many have been in business from 20 to 30 years. Of the 64 general building and highway contractors in business during 1929, the report shows nine organized before 1900, 18 between 1900 and 1913, 6 from 1914-19, and 20 between 1920 and 1924.

A similar relative distribution is found among subcontracting concerns, 16 of 125 reporting business histories of more than 30 years.

The Census Bureau's data also showed an increasing tendency toward incorporation of subcontracting firms since 1924. During the last five-year period, 20 of the 48 reporting companies were incorporated, the majority of these during the three earlier years of the period. Approximately two-fifths of the 227 reporting construction firms are incorporated companies.

Citizenship Asked For Samoa Islands

Senator Bingham Submits Preliminary Report to President.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, chairman of the congressional Samoan commission, yesterday made his preliminary report to President Hoover recommending that the islands be given a bill of rights taking them from under the direct jurisdiction of the Navy and granting American citizenship to their 10,000 inhabitants.

Senator Bingham and three other members of the commission, Senator Robinson (Democrat), Arkansas; Representative Beedy (Republican), Maine, and Representative Williams (Democrat), Texas, have just returned from an inspection tour of the islands.

For years the American Samoa Islands have been controlled by the commandant of the Naval base there under what Senator Bingham described as "the most unlimited autocracy the world has ever seen." He said, however, that the Navy had conducted a benevolent administration and had kept the islands freer from disease than any others in the Pacific Ocean.

Indemnities Suit Lost By World War Veteran

Floyd Patterson, World War veteran, yesterday lost his suit against the Government, in which he had contended that the Veterans' Bureau had failed to pay him monthly indemnities to which he alleges he was entitled under his $10,000 War Risk Insurance policy.

The decision was reached by a jury in District Supreme Court after Justice Wendell P. Stafford had ordered a directed verdict. In directing the jury to return a verdict in favor of the Government, Justice Stafford pointed out that the plaintiff had had the benefit of vocational education and had not shown that he had been disabled.

Capital Will View Navy's 'Tin Bubble'

Famous All-Metal Airship Will Be Brought Here for Celebration.

Washington will get its first view of the Navy's famous "tin bubble," officially known as Navy airship ZMC-2, next Monday, the Navy Department announced yesterday. The all-metal airship has been ordered here from its station at Lakehurst, N. J., in connection with Navy day.

The "tin bubble" is constructed entirely of sheet aluminum alloy, 95 thousandths of an inch thick. Its gas bag is 150 feet long and 53 inches in diameter at the waist and is held together by approximately 3,500,000 rivets. It contains 200,000 cubic feet of helium gas and cruises on its two 220-horsepower engines at about 50 miles an hour.

According to present plans, the ZMC-2 will arrive over Washington Monday at 12:05 o'clock and will remain here approximately 30 minutes. From here it will return via Alexandria, Va., and Annapolis, Md., to Lakehurst.

Probationer Asks For Jail Sentence

Tells Judge He Fears Evil Companions Will Cause Him to Err.

James Norton walked into Police Court yesterday and asked Judge Gus A. Schuldt to send him to jail for six months, so that he would escape the influence of evil companions who would get him into trouble. He had been given a suspended sentence by the same judge a few days ago when he was charged with stealing $33 worth of clothing from Henry C. Talbert.

But Norton was afraid he couldn't live up to the probation on which he was placed, so he went to the probationer's office yesterday with this unusual request. They sent him into Police Court.

The judge obligingly complied, and now he has 180 days in front of him in which to repent and mend his ways.

Warehouse Fire Probe Brings Praise for Trio

Acting Fire Marshal A. C. Achstetter and Privates J. R. Gray and R. C. Roberts were commended by the District Commissioners yesterday for their "extraordinary judgment and zeal" in pursuing their investigation of the recent fire in the Hub Furniture Co. warehouse. The investigation led to the arrest of L. A. Butler, an employe of the company, on charges of having set the several fires which occurred in the warehouse in the last year or so.

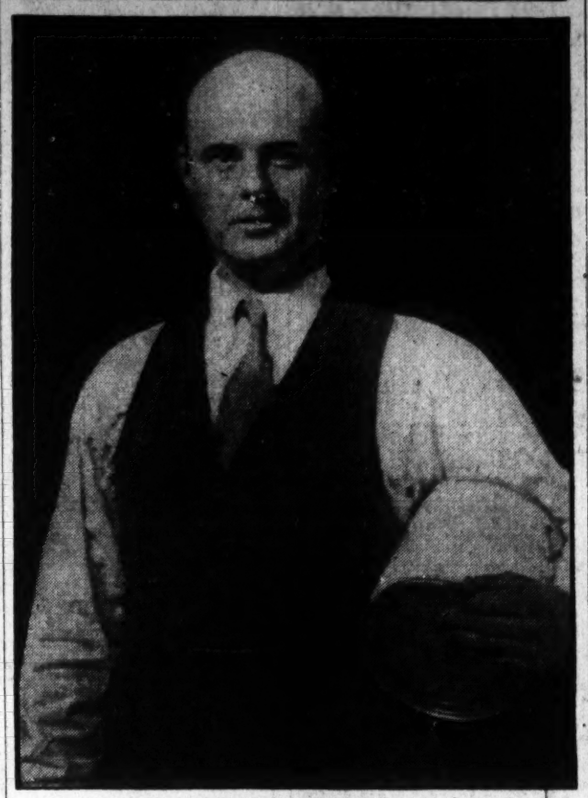
The men will get official commendations in formal letters to be written them by the Commissioners on recommendation of Fire Chief George S. Watson and the advisory board of award for the department. The two privates were granted $5 a month additional pay also.

$10,000 Bond Is Fixed On Auto-Theft Charge

Charged with violating the national motor vehicle theft act, Samuel Rives Alley yesterday was arraigned before the United States commissioner and was ordered held under $10,000 bond.

Agents of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice alleged that Alley had stolen an automobile belonging to Stanley Rosenbaum last October 10 and had sold it to another party. The automobile is said to have been transported in interstate commerce after the alleged theft and it was on this grounds that the Federal charge was made instead of the usual District charge of grand larceny, the commissioner said.

KEPT RUM IN HOUSE BUILDING



GEORGE L. CASSIDAY,
Capitol bootlegger, whose article today tells how he stored and cut liquor in the House Office Building.

CASSIDAY STORED RUM SUPPLY IN HOUSE OFFICE BUILDING

as much as a case of liquor from the office without fear of being stopped at the door or on the way home.

It was soon apparent to me that if I could get a good supply inside the building and not have to bring it in in small lots every day or two it would be an ideal system of doing business.

Was Given Key.

One of my good customers gave me a key to a room in the House Office Building, where I could stow a good quantity away out of sight and draw on it as needed. I found that on days when I wasn't too busy with deliveries I could bring in a couple of suitcases full and get it into this room without being bothered. Usually I had to use one of the side entrances at night or come in late in the day just as the House had adjourned and there were a good many people passing in and out.

This arrangement worked out well. It saved making so many separate trips into the building and I found I could fill orders much more promptly and conveniently by having my base of operations on the inside.

There were periods when it was hard to get good liquor from any source and it was therefore necessary at times to cut the stuff I was able to obtain. I discovered I could do this in my storeroom in the House Office Building.

Had All Squipment.

This room had all the ordinary equipment of a congressman's office. It opened on the court and when the blinds were pulled and the door opening on the corridor was bolted there was no chance of being interrupted at work.

At one end of the room was a lavatory where I could get hot running water at any time, and there was a big table to work on which gave me plenty of elbow room.

As I have said, it was sometimes necessary to cut the stuff, but when good ingredients are used it is possible to turn out stuff which is just as good as the blended whisky the rectifiers used to turn out at the wholesale liquor houses. Using one gallon of pure rye whisky as a base, adding one gallon of pure grain alcohol and one gallon of hot water from the spigot and then adding a little bouquet coloring, I found it was possible to turn out 12 quarts of about 90 to 96 proof that was entirely satisfactory.

Entire Stock Stolen!

This went on for some months and I stored and cut my supplies without any difficulty until one morning I went to this room to get some stock to fill the day's orders in the building. I learned then that the House Office Building was not a safe place in which to leave goods of this kind lying around unguarded. I had left five or six cases in the room and the entire batch had been stolen! It was a pretty serious blow to me. Evidently some one with a duplicate key knew I was storing it there and had carted off five or six hundred dollars' worth of supplies.

That experience prompted me to abandon the old system, so I rented a house and worked from the outside from then on. I found a few customers with whom it was safe to leave any surplus that I had with me at the end of the day's work, but I never attempted again to keep a large supply on hand in the House Office Building.

During the entire ten years I spent on Capitol Hill my relations with my customers were cordial and friendly.

Bar Flies Association.

We used to have what we called the Bar Flies Association in the House Office Building at this time. There were about a dozen good fellows in this group.

Most of the regular attendants were congressmen, and we met generally in the office of a congressman from the Atlantic Seaboard who gave the club its name and liked to have us gather in his place after the House had adjourned. In addition, we would let in a few clerks of committees and secretaries to other congressmen.

I remember one secretary in particular whose congressman was one of the dry leaders in the House. This secretary couldn't get a drop around his own office and he would sometimes be pretty thirsty by late in the afternoon.

Had Special "Knock."

While the Bar Flies Association in the House Office Building was a rather informal organization, we had to observe a few regulations as time went on. For example, we had a special "knock" that had to be given before the door would be opened. There was one congressman at that time who had made a nuisance of himself coming around for something to drink and we fixed up the special "knock" to keep him and others like him out.

It wasn't a question of buyer and seller at these gatherings, but we all just enjoyed ourselves together. We would have a few rounds of drinks, sing a few songs and have a general good time. Afterward we would go downtown for dinner and maybe an occasional show.

Another room where we used to gather in this period was a little room in the basement of the House Office Building. This was the "poker room." It was located in a corridor in the basement which corresponded with a corridor above on the first floor, where some of the members had their offices. It was tucked away well out of sight, where there was no danger at all of disturbance.

Furnished for Card Game.

This room had ideal furnishings for a good, sociable card game. There was a mahogany table with a green felt top and plenty of upholstered swivel chairs. Sometimes half a dozen congressmen would sit in for a game when there wasn't much doing on the floor of the House. Often they would bring in constituents who were their cronies back in their districts and who wanted to take a hand.

As I remember, the stakes were never very high in these games. I knew one representative from the Middle West who made it a regular habit to play poker with three or four of his colleagues of the House nearly every afternoon. This member was a chairman of one of the important committees, and he conducted the games in his own committee room adjoining his regular office. I spent a good many afternoons in this committee room. Three of the members who were usually there were good customers of mine and liked to have me call while they were enjoying a bit of relaxation from their legislative duties.

House Building Seemed Home.

From 1920 to 1925 were the good old days for me, and I like to look back on them. The House Office Building got so it seemed like home to me. I knew every nook and corner in it. The fact that the Capitol police and the door guards were appointed by members of Congress seemed to assure me of protection in getting into the building. Once inside I was always sure of a hearty welcome in the offices which I visited in a day's rounds.

Early in 1925, however, something happened that forced me to drop a well-established business among members of the House and start all over again in the Senate Office Building.

Tomorrow: "The Man in the Green Hat" will tell of his arrest in the House Office Building while delivering a brief case filled with liquor to a congressman. The story will relate how this incident gave him the name which brought him Nation-wide publicity.

$5,574 RUM FOUND IN PASTOR'S BARN

HELD SYNDICATE'S WORK

Special to The Washington Post.

Columbus, S. C., Oct. 24.—Stacked and crammed almost to the roof of a barn of the Rev. Alonzo Wilson, county and State officers seized nearly 1,900 gallons of corn whisky—the largest capture ever made in the history of Richland County prohibition enforcement—on a farm about twelve miles from Columbia on the Leesburg road.

Five children, between the ages of 8 and 3 years, scampered out of the way of the officers as they descended on the locked and barred barn and broke their way in to be confronted with more liquor than had ever been seized before in this county.

266 Cases in Jars.

There were 266 cases in jars with 6 gallons to the case; 260 gallons in brand-new 10-gallon kegs and another keg of 2 gallons, making a total of 1,858 gallons actually counted and destroyed on the spot by the officers. In the rush and excitement of the destruction, Sheriff T. A. Heise, who led the raid, believes that 40 or 50 gallons may have been destroyed uncounted.

Wilson has not been found although both the State and the county policemen are looking for him. The officers say that he is in hiding somewhere and they believe that they can find him. In the meantime they are continuing their investigations, indicating that they believe Wilson was not necessarily the owner of the liquor, but that his barn was used by a syndicate of bootleggers or one big scale operator.

Valued at $3 a Gallon.

Based on conservative wholesale white corn liquor prices, the cache seized yesterday morning had a value, discounting the cost of the fruit jars and the kegs, of $5,574 when $3 a gallon is considered as the selling price.

In retail lots of a gallon or more the booze would have brought from $3.50 to $6 a gallon as it stood, depending upon its age, method of transaction in credit or cash and means of delivery.

Had the liquor been allowed to age, especially that in the kegs, it may have brought, on the Columbia retail market, anywhere up to $8 a gallon.

REDS OVERRUNNING PROVINCES IN CHINA

Bishop Magniani were ordered to proceed on foot through bandit and Communist infested country to Kiukiang to obtain ransom for 14 fellow missionaries.

At Nanchang, they were joined by Father Breucker, a Dutch priest, who escaped from Kishiu when it fell to Communists.

Breucker believed Bishop Sheehan, of Streator, Ill., was hiding in mountains near Fuchow after escaping from Jaochow when reds plundered the Lazarist Mission. Nothing was known of Father Altenburg, Milwaukee, Wis., and Leo Moore, Perryville, Mo., who also fled from Jaochow.

Hid for Four Days.

Describing the entry of the Reds into Kian, Father de Jenlis said:

"I managed to hide in the home of a Chinese Christian for five days before being captured, but Bishop Magnani and the other priests and sisters were captured October 5.

"The Reds evidenced a thorough organization, their leaders being outstanding Communist chieftains in China. They addressed their captives with 'Do not be afraid; maybe we won't kill you. However, you must leave China. We are not allowing the propagation of religion.'

"The first few days the captives were herded into Chinese houses and closely guarded, but each was well fed, being given the same food as the Red soldiers. The Communist's motto is 'Equality in everything for everybody.'

"Later the male and female captives were separated (several nuns were among those captured), although the treatment continued surprisingly considerate. Meanwhile Red troops conducted a systematic looting which resulted in millions of dollars worth of merchandise and property being carried away and given to poor. Kian is a wealthy city.

Reds Make Ransom Demand.

"On October 13 the Reds informed Bishop Magnani and I that a ransom would be necessary if the captives were to be released. The chiefs stated we would be allowed to go to Nanchang and Kiukiang to get $10,000,000 as ransom. However, they indicated that $1,000,000, or even $500,000, would be enough.

"We were given Red 'passports,' consisting of written statements bearing the signatures of Red chiefs, that we were entitled to a safe journey. We also were supplied with three servants who were Red agents to certify that we proceeded according to instructions.

"We departed by boat October 15 for Nanchang, thence by rail to Kiukiang and from there by steamer to Shanghai.

"En route to Nanchang roving Reds frequently stopped us, but our Red passports proved effective and we were not molested.

"As we left Kian the Reds said they would collect the ransom in Kiukiang in two weeks, saying they anticipated the capture of that city and Nanchang within a fortnight.

"Although Kian received a thorough looting, little burning was permitted despite Chinese reports to the contrary. The Red organization at Kian shows the Communists are operating an organized movement throughout Hupeh, Hunan and Kiangsi provinces.

"Orders come from a centralized authority, while Red Russian influences constitute the controlling factor."

(Associated Press.)

The State Department was informed yesterday by cable that two new efforts had been initiated to effect the release of the Rev. Bert N. Nelson, of Minneapolis, American missionary captured by bandits in China.

Frank P. Lockhart, American consul general at Hankow, reported he had sent a telegram to Gen. Yo Ying China, at Chengchow, urging him to send a special representative into Kwangshan to push plans for Nelson's release. He said he had made similar representations to Gen. Ho Chen Chun at Hankow.

Lockhart said it had not been possible to telegraph to Kian, where a Filipino sister was reported kidnaped. He added he believed no Americans remained in that territory since the one woman missionary recently was seen in Kiukiang.

Colorado Senator's Wife Promises $100,000 to Wells.

WITH the announcement of the recent pledge of $100,000 by Mrs. Lawrence C. Phipps toward the fund for a new administration building at Wells College, other benefactions of the wife of Senator Phipps are recalled, particularly her definitely expressed interest in artists, those who have arrived and those who have not. Always a patron of the arts, friends in Washington have so closely associated Mrs. Phipps with things artistic that her activity in behalf of her alma mater has been somewhat submerged here.

Mrs. Phipps, an alumnae of Wells College, is one of the trustees of the institution and has been greatly interested in the project which ultimately will give to the college at Auburn, N. Y., a $600,000 building. Mrs. Cleveland H. Dodge, of New York, has been appointed chairman of the campaign which was launched recently.

Senator and Mrs. Phipps were in Washington not long ago, the senator interrupting his vacation from Congress to carry on his activity as delegate to the sixth international road congress, which convened in Washington. Capital Woman Gains Annulment of Marriage

Justice William Hitz in District Supreme Court yesterday signed an order annuling the marriage of Miss Helen Reed, of Park road northwest near Sixteenth street, to John T. L. Moore.

The annulment was granted on complaint that the marriage ceremony performed November 24, 1928, in Rapid City, S. Dak., was not binding because Moore had not been legally divorced from his first wife. Under the justice's order Moore is to pay court costs and attorney's fees and the woman he married is entitled to resume her maiden name. Attorneys Raymond Neudecker and William C. Ashford appeared for the woman.

Federal Employe Group Described

Activities of Federation Outlined on Air by Nolda.

Activities of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and methods by which needed legislation is sought were explained by H. G. Nolda, of the Veterans' Bureau, in an address broadcast over Station WOL last night.

Through the federation's locals in every State and insular possession, Mr. Nolda said, Government employes have an opportunity to discuss problems confronting them. The locals elect representatives to biannual conventions and these gatherings outline objectives which they believe are necessary to better the economic conditions of workers.

Explaining that the federation has approximately 50,000 members, of which 12,000 are enrolled in Washington locals, Mr. Nolda said, "This closely organized group with an ever-growing prestige, made possible by its adherence to principle, will go far if given the same faithful support in the future that it has received in the past."

Cow Frightens Child; Damage Suit Results

Allegations that a "cross and irritable cow" made a hostile demonstration and caused her to be injured were made in a suit filed yesterday in District Supreme Court in which Louise Marie Carter, 8 years old, of 3130 Chestnut street northeast, seeks to recover $25,000 damages from the Columbia Institute for the Deaf, at Seventh street and Florida avenue northeast.

The child alleges that she suffered a fractured leg November 4, 1927, when among a group of children she was taken to Gallaudet College, operated by the defendant. She alleges that while making the visit a cow was allowed to come near the children, and that they, becoming panicky, stampeded. In the rush, she declares, she suffered the injuries.

Social Circle Makes Plans For November

Hostesses in Capital Anticipate Busy Season.

A wedding of interest to Washington which took place in Atlanta, Ga., on Thursday evening was that of Miss Caro du Bignon Henry, of New York, and Mr. Albert Howell, of Atlanta. The marriage unites two distinguished families of Georgia. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Cooper Anderson Henry, of New York, and has prominent family connections in Georgia. Mr. Howell is a son of Mr. Clark Howell, editor of the Atlanta Constitution. His brother, Mr. Comer Howell, is widely known in Washington, having passed several years here as a student at the Foreign Service School and the State Department from which he resigned on June 1, 1929.

Mrs. Howell, stepmother of Mr. Albert Howell, is the sister of Mrs. David Hunt Blair, of Washington.

The ceremony was performed in All Saints Episcopal Church by Bishop H. J. Mikell, assisted by the Rev. Dr. W. W. Memminger, the rector.

Mr. and Mrs. Howell will take a five weeks' trip to South America.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Elmore Cropley have as their guests Mrs. Cropley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bristow Wornall, of Kansas City. After his visit here Mr. Wornall will go to St. Petersburg, Fla., while Mrs. Wornall will remain with Mr. and Mrs. Cropley for several weeks before joining Mr. Wornall in Kansas City.

Mrs. Medoram Crawford and her daughter have returned to Washington for the winter and will be at their home, 1801 Sixteenth street.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Berrett, of Salt Lake City, Utah, have arrived in Washington and are stopping at the Potomac Park Apartments.

Mrs. Addison Ricaud has arrived at the Powhatan from her home in Wilmington, N. C.

CREDIT the newspapers with another reform at the Radio Commission! In the past when a station was cited for a violation and had its license held up the commission frequently hid behind the generalization that the station was not "operating in the public interest."

Very often stations were called upon the carpet when the operators claimed they didn't have the slightest idea what the charge against them was. A station director who was summoned to Washington last week declared to this writer that he had not been told what was wrong and therefore was at great disadvantage in having to defend his station against charges sprung at a public hearing.

HOWEVER, this week when some 50 stations were cited for violations and the Radio Commission refused to make public the specific charges against each station, such a bombardment followed from the newspaper men that the commission capitulated by giving out the desired information.

Further, it was announced that hereafter there would be no attempt to cover up in such matters, but that the charges would be made public and the stations themselves fully acquainted with them.

It may therefore now be told that the charges against WOL, the local station cited, are having been off its frequency and playing phonograph records without announcing them.

APPARATUS for home recording in connection with the combination radio and phonograph set, promises to offer a new vehicle for the exchange of Christmas greetings.

"The public," says M. C. Rypinski, of the Westinghouse Co., which this year entered the radio field with a self-recording radio set, "has already taken up the idea of using these records for holiday greetings.

"It is very easy to record the best wishes of the season in your own voice on these records which require no special preparation. As these records are unbreakable they can be mailed to distant points to friends and members of the family, who can reproduce them without any special apparatus."

Sammy Watkins, who sings with his orchestra during their broadcasts from Cleveland, says his ability to reach high Cs dates back to his birth. He was born on a ship coming to the United States from England.

In addition to what his earnings from vaudeville and phonograph may be, it is currently reported that Rudy Vallee will receive $175,000 this year for his radio work.

A SUBSTANTIAL promotion has been received by Glenn I. Tucker, in charge of the press bureau of the Radio Corporation of America here. Mr. Tucker will become manager of the Radio Corporation's public relations department, embracing the New York press bureau, with offices in New York.

Mr. Tucker will also have general supervision over R. C. A. advertising.

Viscount Astor, speaking from London tomorrow (WMAL, 12:30 p. m.), will ask his American listeners if the United States repeal or amend the eighteenth amendment, what they will put in its place?

MURIEL HARBATER, who is Jane on the "Jolly Bill and Jane" program, knew that "Jolly Bill" had planned a party for her on her twelfth birthday recently in the studio, but she didn't know he was going to parade out every single character of the program.

All of the fifteen characters whom "Jolly Bill" impersonates on the program came forth with a remembrance for the occasion. Even the "Old Witch" did not forget her.

His meeting with James Whitcomb Riley will be the subject of James J. Corbett's next talk (Howard Dandies, 6:30 p. m., WABC net, tomorrow).

To meet the Damrosch school concerts being conducted by the N. B. C., a series of young people's concerts of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, under the direction of Ernest Schelling, noted pianist and composer, will be inaugurated by Columbia at 11 o'clock this morning.

Mr. Damrosch will offer the following over WRC at 9 o'clock tonight:

Overture, "The Merry Wives of Windsor;" Third Movement, Symphony No. 2, Brahms; "On the Steppes of Central Asia," Borodin; "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," Dukas, and dances from the "Nutcracker Suite."

IF successful the three-way conversation between London, Tokyo and Washington Monday, inconnection with the ratification of the naval treaty, will be the first time a program direct from Japan will have been made available to an American audience (WRC, 9:50 a. m.).

Dare Interprets the MODE

EVER hear of a trunkful of hats? Well, you're hearing about one now, and it was my trunk and full of hats. And when the customs officials got through with me, well, I appreciated those Paris hats 8 per cent more than I ever did, if you see what I mean.

And, know something? About 8 per cent of that trunkful of hats are basque beret inspiration! They are varied as can be, of course, and since I don't look well in out and out berets, they are quite, quite disguised. But take them all apart and put them together again, and what do you start with else than the same beret foundation that makes Mamzelle's clever little sports and work-a-day hats!

That's the hat story for this winter, I assure you. For children and grown-ups, for sportswear and dressier wear, from velvets to tweeds.

• • • •

And because of that, plus several requests for them, I have made you a leaflet of different ways to make berets, and tell you in this leaflet how to make some of the hats that I brought from Paris in that trunk, by taking any one of the berets you make and dragging it over this or that way, and holding this "drag" in place with a bow or band of ribbon! If you get that stamped, self-addressed envelope ready now to send to the Dare Department of The Washington Post, your letter will arrive about when the new leaflets do, and you will be one of the first to get yours.

• • • •

Now, now, I understand. Yes, it's awful to be so busy, and so many little things that we want just sort of slip by, don't they? So tell you what to do—buy two packages of cheap envelopes, and address the top envelope of one package to "Dare," The Washington Post, and the top envelope of the other package to yourself. Then give both packages to hubby and ask him to have his steno type both packages of envelopes as sample. When he brings 'em home, stamp them all, and put one of your own envelopes into each one addressed to me, put an elastic around them, and put them in the desk drawer. Then every time you see an announcement of a leflet you want or think you might want some time, it is easy as anything to grab one of those letters and drop it into the postbox. That's how you will have time to get all the leaflets you really want, see?

The merits of French chalk as a cleansing agent are not well enough appreciated. You can buy this preparation in any drug store under that name, and it is remarkable what it will do, for instance, for your white furs. Just have a simple linen bag with a draw-string in it, so that it can be hung in a closet, and dust plenty of French chalk into your fur, slip it into this bag, and hang it up and away. Several hours before you are going to use the fur dust the French chalk out of it, and it will be as near white and fluffy as a white fur ever is—ever is, and always should be.

The French-maid-who-is-Spanish always treats my white kid gloves that way when they aren't quite soiled enough to be sent to the cleaner. Also all my gray, white or pastel-colored dresses. Yes, actually many a light-colored garment that has no special spots or stains, but is just dingy-looking, can be covered with a dime's worth of French chalk, put away in a paper bag for 24 hours, shaken out thoroughly and ironed, and look as though it just came from the cleaner's.

• • • •

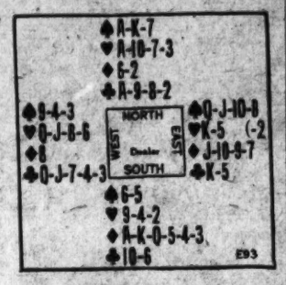
WORK ON BRIDGE

This article is intended for the Auction and Contract Bridge beginner.



In the above hand at Auction, South bid two Diamonds, showing a six-card suit headed by the Ace-King-Queen; West passed and North obtained the contract with a bid of two No Trumps.

Had it been played at Contract, South would have bid two Diamonds to show three high-card and three low-card tricks and North would have become the Declarer with a bid of three No Trumps.

In the play East led initially the top of his Spade sequence (the Queen), which was won with the Ace in the closed hand. At the start Declarer should count the sure tricks in his own and dummy's hand; he can not obtain the best results without doing so; and by doing so he may see what precautions should be taken against a possible unfavorable split of the cards held by the adversaries of a suit he wants to establish. The Declarer who played this deal either failed to take this precaution or failed to avail himself of the information after he obtained it.

Declarer can count seven sure tricks—ten if the adverse Diamonds are divided 3-2. When dummy holds only five in a suit headed by Ace-King-Queen and no other entry, and closed hand only two of the suit, the first trick should be conceded to the adversaries when only four tricks of that suit are necessary for game; but when dummy has a six-card suit and closed hand two of that suit, as in the above hand, many would figure rightly that the odds favor a 3-2 split and try for an extra trick, forgetting that the odds are greatly against the play because the loss of the game means so much more than the gain of an extra trick.

In the play of the above hand Declarer tried to run his Diamonds, he struck a hard luck break and failed, so he made only seven tricks. At trick 2 he should have led a small Diamond and played small from dummy. East would have won and continued with the Jack of Spades, which Declarer should have won with the King and made the five Diamonds in the dummy; his Ace of Hearts and Ace of Clubs would give him three-odd and game.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

PLEASE tell me how to get rid of ants that are attacking my rose bushes. J. C.

If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed envelope, I shall be glad to tell you of a proprietary preparation which will aid you in getting rid of ants.

I wish to plant some hollyhocks for blooming next season. Also, what tall shrub will bloom in complete shade? EDNA M.

You should have sown the hollyhock seed in August as soon as it was ripe. It is too late to sow seed now. I am sorry, but I do not know now of any shrub that will bloom in complete shade. Rhododendrons bloom in partial shade.

Can you tell me what caused the inclosed plant to wither? It has not withered as yet, but several of my other plants just like it have, and the cause of it seems to be just where the roots emerge from the ground. R. O.

The seedling you inclosed seemed quite healthy. Perhaps you are losing your plants due to cutworms. If you care to write again, inclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to send you the name of a preparation that will aid you in getting rid of these pests.

Polygonum should prove suitable for such a location.

Please tell me when to sow the seed of gaillardia and delphinium. When should hollyhock seed be sown to have flowers next summer? MRS. R. O. L.

Gaillardia when raised from seed do not bloom the same summer unless the seed is sown very early. Larkspur seed over a year old will not grow. The seedlings will not produce flowers the first year unless the seed is sown in March in a hotbed or sunny window. The exception to this rule is the delphinium grandiflorim, the Chinese larkspur. Usually growers sow fresh seed in August, in which case the plants bloom the following season. Hollyhock seed is best sown in August, using fresh seed. Later these plants should be wintered in a cold frame.

Please tell me why the leaves of my barberry bush wither and fall. Also please suggest a way to induce my magnolia tree to bloom. MRS. A. R. B.

Poor soil, lack of water, insufficient drainage or dense shade may be reasons why a barberry loses its leaves. Again it may be attacked by blight, in which case it should be sprayed with bordeaux mixture at this time and again before growth starts in the spring. Better apply a mulch of well-rotted manure about its roots this fall. A magnolia tree does not flower until it has attained a certain age. I know of no way to hasten its blooming.

Imagine my horror when I found practically all the plants in my garden affected with the same blight as the leaves I am inclosing. Please tell how to counteract this condition. MRS. E. B. D.

Better spray your plants with bordeaux mixture. Also, go over them each day and remove and burn all dead or dying leaves as this will prevent a spread of the disease.

Please identify the inclosed leaves. Also tell me how to slip a cutting of a hydrangea (French hybrid) plant C. W. E.

No. 1, variety of plum. Do not know the other specimens. A cutting from a hydrangea must be rooted in sand. The time to do this work is in March. It is hard to root a hydrangea cutting without the facilities of a greenhouse..

What Today Means to You

"SCORPIO."

IF October 25 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7 a. m. to 8:30 a. m., from 3 p. m. to 4 p. m. and 9 p. m. to 10 p. m. The danger periods are from noon to 1 p. m. and 5 p. m. to 6 p. m.

There will be a "mixed grill" of events on this date, mostly unimportant ones. Few prearranged plans will be carried out. Your merit and character will be attacked by jealous associates. Run no health risks, as the astrological influences are of a lowering nature.

The child born on this October 25 will have a rather tactless and unrestrained nature, and will give offence without meaning to do so. It will love freedom, adventure, amusements, sports and sociability. It will learn more from experience, travel, and observation than from books.

You are not temperamentally fitted to live a solo life. You do not necessarily want to lean on some one else, but you are unhappy if you can not share your life closely with another sympathetic being. You are a brave, unselfish, enthusiastic companion—alone you are cowardly and depressed. You desire life, gayety and color, but you seek these externally. Your spirits need constant stimulation. You seek change and variety—not so much in people, as in other things, for you stick to your pals.

You are quick-witted and entertaining, although you are not a profound and deep thinker. Your keen powers of observation are of great value to you, and your chief source of information. You are not original, but you are a clever mimic and imitator. You have fastidious tastes, and are never careless about your personal appearance. You are also proud and careful in the choice of your associates. Your likes and dislikes are very pronounced and you are rather inclined to baby them. You allow your hates to play too big a part in your life, and many of them should be conquered. You are a malicious and revengeful enemy, and you seldom forgive, and never forget. You will often sacrifice a bright future for the sake of the present, for you do not suffer discomforts with any degree of amiability. If you be a woman, you allow yourself to become hysterical at times when you should keep your head, and you should endeavor to overcome all neurasthenic tendencies.

Successful people born October 25:
1—Richard Howell, Governor of New Jersey.
2—Levi Lincoln 2d, potlitician.
3—Franklin Bache, chemist.
4—William A. Norton, scientist.
6—John Coleman Adams, clergyman and author.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. AGNES LYNE.

The Bright Side.

A closely united, loving family is an ideal to which we cling despite the cumulative changes in modern life which more and more make it impossible for that old-fashioned, mutually dependent and exclusive group to exist.

Yet the loss of this ideal is not a total loss. There is a very bright side to the picture.

The old-fashioned family tended to emphasize the emotional elements between parents and children, between brothers and sisters.

The world outside the home was often unable to compete with the satisfactions found within it. Not infrequently this too-satisfying family life stood between the children and the world which they should have been exploring.

At the age of adolescence when they ought to have been making contacts with larger groups of their own age they stayed at home. The adjustments to many different temperaments and situations which is part of the lesson of youth was made more difficult because there was less incentive for new relationships as long as the old ones were satisfying.

Children of today are compelled almost from the very beginning to make adjustments to the world beyond the home. Many of them start at the age of 2.

Nursery schools, kindergarten, school, play groups, clubs, camps, all draw them more and more to find their satisfactions in group relationships and impersonal activities.

They are compelled very early in life to learn to get along with many different kinds of people. Their emotions are not over cultivated. The rough corners of their personalities receive the polishing which only contact with many people can give.

This turning the child loose upon the world with only just enough love and security to give him self-confidence tends to make him self-sufficient and psychologically independent at an early age.

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

(Bureau of Standards, Department of Commerce.)

Brushes for applying oil paints must be well cleaned after using, though for keeping overnight it is generally sufficient to wrap them in several thicknesses of paper. Some painters keep their brushes overnight by putting them in paper. If, however, the brush is not to be used for several days, the paint should be washed out of it. Turpentine is one of the most satisfactory materials for washing a brush, but it is expensive, and a brush can generally be washed as well with kerosene, which is much cheaper. After washing off the paint with kerosene the brush should be rinsed with gasoline or benzine, then thoroughly shaken and well washed with soap and warm water.

As soon as this washing is complete the brush should be shaken thoroughly so as to throw as much water out of it as possible, and hung up with the bristles down to dry. When dried the brush should be thoroughly protected from dust. If much painting is being done, it is less trouble to keep the brushes in turpentine or kerosene. For this purpose hooks should be fastened on the inside of a pail with a close-fitting cover, the brushes being suspended either by holes in the handles or by loops of string, so that they hang in the kerosene or turpentine in the bottom of the pail. The bristles should be submerged in the liquid, but should not touch the bottom of the pail.

If kerosene is used for cleansing, it should be removed by shaking the brush and rinsing it in turpentine before using again with paint. Brushes used with whitewash or calcimine should simply be washed and not put in the same liquids in which the brushes for oil paints are kept. If a brush has been used for shellac varnish, it should be kept in alcohol or in the varnish itself. In general, a varnish brush may be kept in the varnish in which it is used.

IT WAS LOCKED

By JOHN HAWK.

READ THIS FIRST.

The Earl of Winston's body is found in the room of Robin Smith, young poet, at a house party at Alston Manor. Robin has attended so he may see Lady Gwendolen Winston, with whom he is desperately in love. In a fit of anger the poet locks his door and jumps out of the window, returning to his attic room. The next day he is arrested and the various members of the party testify at the coroner's inquest. Bruce Armstrong, big game hunter, testified he observed a hidden enmity between Prince Poseleysky, a guest, and the murdered man. But the evidence is strongly against Robin. Robin Smith is called to the stand.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XX.

This is not a helpful opening for Robin, but he resolves to tell his story as naturally and accurately as his nervous state will allow him. He counts on its truth, and his own evident sincerity to help him with the jury, who are leaning forward in their seats and staring fixedly at him as he speaks. He goes on and on; he tells the same story he has already told to both of the inspectors. He tells it quietly, seriously, even simply; but the story itself is fantastic, unbelievable.

"I am guilty of nothing but pride. My pride alone, my damnable pride, has put me in this equivocal position. I have already been punished enough!"

One listener, at least, in that room is impressed. And that listener Robin himself would have chosen from among all in the room to listen to him, and to believe him. It is Lady Gwendolen. She listens to his every word, notes his every gesture, his simple, sometimes halting, sentences which she is conscious must come straight from the heart; their vibrant quality touches some hidden chords in her, and she is moved almost to tears. Surely, if it were all a lie, he couldn't speak as he does; surely, if it were all a lie, he couldn't move her so! Poor Robin! How could she have laughed at him—was it but yesterday? It seems ages ago!

Inspector Linscott of New Scotland Yard is next called.

"In answer to a wire from the local constable you were sent down from the Yard on the morning after the murder?"

"I was."

"What time did you arrive?"

"On the 4:10 in the morning, and was here at the manor ten minutes later."

"What did you find here?"

"I found your local constable who had been telephoned to by Lady Dorothy Alston's butler and who is not present today because of illness. He had been summoned in about midnight, and as soon as I arrived he showed me the body in the exact position in which he had found it. Nothing had been touched."

"What did you do first?"

"I took a general statement from the constable, which included information given him by Dr. Middlebury and Mr. Armstrong. Then he and I made as thorough an examination of the room in which the body had been discovered as was possible in the early light, assisted only by the two lamps."

"Did you see anything of consequence?"

"Nothing whatever. The room was undisturbed except for the fact that the casement window stood wide open, which was not unnatural in June. The clothing on the body was crumpled, but I did not see any actual signs of a struggle having taken place."

"What were your next proceedings?"

"Owing to the information contained in Mr. Armstrong's first statement, which he had given to the local constable, I first went outside into the garden and examined the ground near and immediately under the open window."

"What did you discover?"

"The two footprints which Mr. Armstrong had seen on the night before by the light of the candle were still plainly visible. There was also a larger indentation near. I have since decided that this was caused by the bag of Mr. Smith, which he threw from the window before he himself descended. The footprints are undoubtedly his. I have tried a pair of his shoes in them and they fit exactly."

Robin jumps. A pair of his shoes! He has only one pair and they are on his feet. Then it occurs to him that one night when he put them outside his door for cleaning, the detective must have borrowed them. What else has been going on, he wonders, as they twist the hemp for the rope for the final act. He is gradually growing numb and he is glad of this. He shot his last bolt when he told his own story. He is worn out and indifferent now. Nothing seems to matter.

"And after that?"

"I immediately got in touch with the Yard, and having learned from Lady Dorothy Alston Mr. Smith's address in London, I asked to have a man sent out there to examine Mr. Smith's room and bring him back to Alston. I felt I already had something of a prima facie case."

The coroner nods emphatically and with evident agreement.

"And then?"

"Then I interviewed Lady Dorothy and as many of her guests as were in a fit condition to see me at so early an hour."

"You gave no more attention to the house?"

"Certainly. Immediately after breakfast I ascertained the exact location of every room in the manor and the occupant of each. Then I went back to the small room on the half-landing where the body had been discovered before it was removed. It was then I came upon a new and rather surprising fact."

"What was that?"

The men of the jury lean forward. There is something in the Inspector's quiet voice which has excited the curiosity of every one in the room. Robin not the least.

"On the five steps leading from the first floor passage to the half-landing from which this one small room opened, I found blood."

"Blood?"

"Two large and three smaller spots. They were quite dry when I discovered them."

"You think it was the blood of the murdered man?"

"Just so. I believe it spurted at the instant the knife was inserted."

"Then you think the murder occurred on the half-landing, not in the room?"

"I do."

"And you think the murderer afterward dragged his victim into the room and tried to conceal him under the bed valances where he was found?"

"Exactly."

"But would it not be strange for the guilty man to drag his victim into his own room when he could as easily have thrown him down the remaining stairs into the billiardroom?"

"So it seems to me."

Robin's heart leaps at those simple words. Hope again rears her frail head; his stupor is succeeded by an intense aliveness and interest.

"Do you, then, believe it possible that the dead man should have been in Mr. Smith's room and gone unseen by him?"

"It is barely possible; certainly not probable."

"What explanation have you for the fact that the body was found in Mr. Smith's room and the door locked?"

"I have no explanation."

To Robin's surprise Inspector Linscott is dismissed at this juncture and Inspector Deemer called.

"You were sent to 92 Mecklenburgh Square on the morning of June 16; that is, the morning immediately following the murder of Lord Winston?"

"I was."

"Tell the jury what you found there."

"I was admitted to the house, which appeared to be a lodging house, and willingly shown by the maid to Mr. Smith's room. I knocked and a cheery masculine voice, which I since have identified as his, called to me to enter. I did."

Here Inspector Deemer relates the first part of his interview with Robin. He speaks of Robin's stuttering and apparent nervousness, but insists it is not unnatural in the circumstances supposing he were innocent and this his first intimation that a crime had taken place at Alston Manor. But despite his insistence, most of the jurymen look dubious and make no effort to conceal their feelings of skepticism.

"You, of course, made a careful examination of the room?"

"I did."

"And did you find anything of moment?"

"The room was small and very bare except for a great number of books and manuscripts. There was nothing out of the ordinary."

"Did you examine the bag, and the clothing which Mr. Smith had worn at Alston Manor?"

"I did. The bag contained only the usual things."

"And the clothing?"

It seems hours to Robin before Inspector Deemer makes his reply.

"The clothing, that is the wrist of the coat and the leg of one trouser, were stained."

There is a deep intake of breath, a pushing and straining to catch every word.

"Can you tell the jury the nature of the stain?"

"It was blood!"

There is a restless moving in the large room. The air is fraught with intense excitement.

"Blood!" repeats the coroner more loudly. "Had Mr. Smith any explanation for that?"

"He said it must have been caused by a grazed shin and a cut on his wrist. * * *"

"Ah. * * * Did he say how he came by these injuries?"

"He said that he had slipped on the step in the dark when trying to find his room to get his poems and that he cut his wrist in jumping from the window."

"Um. * * *"

After fully two minutes of reflective silence in which the gentlemen of the jury whisper among themselves, the coroner asks:

"Did you find anything else?"

Assisi Ready for Wedding Today of Boris, Giovanna

Assisi, Italy, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The beautiful hill towns of Umbria, from Spoleto to Assisi and Perugia, blazed tonight with tens of thousands of lights on the eve of the wedding of Princess Giovanna of Italy and Boris, King of Bulgaria.

At a given signal an enormous broom of light swept across the country like the flame of a comet. Church bells pealed forth for fifteen minutes, at command of the Bishop of Assisi and every townsman and thousands of visitors swarmed the streets. In the throng were some of the most important personages in several kingdoms of Europe.

For the first time a band played the Bulgarian national anthem in the public square.

Premier Mussolini arrived today and went to the Villa Venansi, belonging to the architect, Carlo Venansi, whose wife formerly was Bertha Rockwell, of Kansas City, Mo.

Former Queen Sophia, of Greece, was the first royal guest to arrive. This afternoon she made a complete tour of the town, visiting the upper and lower churches of St. Francis.

Gradually the other invited princes and princesses arrived throughout the day. Bulgarian Prime Minister Liaptcheff reached Perugia, whence he will motor to Assisi. It was he who, in 1918, forced the abdication of Czar Ferdinand in favor of Boris to get better terms from the allies. Liaptcheff must meet Ferdinand tomorrow upon the station platform when Boris' train arrives from Pisa.

Franciscan friars from many towns have obtained leave of absence to come to Assisi. The street setting today resembled a mob scene in an opera on a stupendous stage wherein characters clad in many colors stalked. Tonight this impression was heightened beneath the electric glare.

The bridal couple, with the Italian and Bulgarian royal families, tonight were traveling in special trains from Pisa where they plan to sleep and remain until just before tomorrow's ceremony.

All china, silver and linen to be used has been brought from San Roesore and other royal palaces. Twenty cooks were hard at work making last minute preparations.

Three floors of the villa will be used for guests. The second floor will be for the royal families, including only princes and princesses of the royal blood, 34 in all.

Nearby and also on the second floor, quarters will be reserved for the ministers.

Pitsnogle for $2,800 as a part of the site of the Douglas-Simmons school near First and M streets northwest. A third lot was bought from Marie E. Dramatist Will Open Jewish Center's Forum

Jacob Ben-Ami, dramatist and actor of Eva LaGallienne's New York Civic Repertory Theater, will open the Jewish Community Center's National Forum tomorrow night with recitations of dramatic readings entitled "An Evening in the Theater."

Will Durant will lecture at the Community Center November 19 on "Is Progress Real?" and other addresses will be made by Dr. Isador Lubins, of the Brookings Institute; Dr. Horace M. Kallen and Louis Untermeyer.

Catholic Theater Unit Planned.

A Little Catholic Theater Group, open to persons interested in acting and stage direction, will be organized at a meeting to be held at 615 C street southeast tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

TREATING THE MOUTH.

DR. E. AIGNIER gives the following recipes as some that he uses with satisfaction:

Mouth cankers: 8 per cent solution of chloride of zinc in water. Dry the ulcer with a little absorbent cotton. Apply the zinc solution. Hold there for one minute. Follow with an application of Talbot's iodine. In most cases one application is enough. To follow with a similar treatment the next day is sometimes necessary.

Mouth wash: Metaphen, 1 to 5,000 in water. Hexylresorcinal, 1 to 2,000 in water. Sodium ricincolate, 1 to 500 in water.

Any one of these solutions was satisfactory as a mouth wash. Destruction of 99 per cent of the bacteria can be expected.

Gingivitis (inflammation of the gums): Apply Talbot's iodine, or a modification, to the gums. Wash off the excess with water.

Talbot's iodine is zinc iodide 15 parts, water 10 parts, glycerin 50 parts. To make, dissolve the zinc iodide in the water, add the iodine, and then the glycerin. Let stand until the crystals are dissolved.

Never use undiluted alcoholic iodine in the mouth. It is too strong and burns the membrane.

Vincent's angina or trench mouth: Apply an 8 per cent solution of chromic acid in water to the ulcerated area. Apply with an applicator. Follow with the home use of the following mouth wash: A scant ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon powdered borax, teaspoon to tablespoon of peroxide in a large glass of warm water. Make up this solution daily. Or 2 teaspoons perborate of soda to a glass of warm water.

The chromic acid solution should be kept in glass stoppered bottles.

Toothache: This pain may be due to inflammation of the pulp. Recipe: 150 grains chloretone to one ounce of oil of cloves. Apply locally.

It may be due to inflammation of the socket around the tooth. Apply Talbot's iodine to the gums or a solution of chlorbutanol in oil of cloves. Oil of cloves turns dark and thickens with age. None should be used except that which is light in color.

Dr. J. E. Keefe has a method of relieving toothache and neuralgia of the teeth, which method gives satisfactory results. It consists in spraying or injecting alcohol along the floor of the nose.

RHEUMATISM AND ITALIANS.

T. H. G. writes:

1. Do the Italian people have rheumatism or arthritis?

2. They use so much olive oil I wondered if it was a solvent for the calcareous deposits in the blood.

REPLY.

1. They do.

2. Olive oil is not a solvent for calcareous deposits in the blood, if there should happen to be such.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

What We Think About Kisses.

DEAR Miss McDonald—I've been reading your column and you have an answer for everything, so I'll give you a few things to answer.

Do you think it is wrong for a girl to neck and pet, without love, just for the thrill of the moment? And what do you think of it with love? What do you think of a girl who necks and pets almost every night with a different fellow? Of course, I've read what some men have said in your column about girls not having any standards, but I don't think men have any better standards. I don't think they know what they are talking about. Men want to kiss girls, and if you don't let them they will anyway. They don't need encouragement either. I think those men are disgusted with themselves and want to blame it on women. I think any man should be disgusted with himself.

Do you think fellows like girls better if they don't smoke and drink than if they do? "A KID."

Well, youngster, if you really have read the column, you already know what this goddess of wisdom thinks about the much over-discussed topic of "petting" or "necking." She thinks it is in the class with the subject of clean linen, or any other matter where daintiness, fastidiousness, or good taste are the deciding factors. You know, there are families where one wash cloth and one towel are used by the entire household. You would not call them immoral because of this lack of fastidiousness, nor would you blame them for their failure to know any better. Well, that is how this particular writer feels about the poor little girl who kisses anybody who wants to kiss somebody and finds her available and willing. Her morals are not involved. It is her brain that is weak. So why blame her?

As to the fact that men need no encouragement, you are correct. As to the assertion that "if you do not let them, they do anyhow," that is as revealing as it is delightful in its unconscious humor. Men know their ground thoroughly, and it is a fact that you can not be a yes girl tonight and a no girl tomorrow, even when the men concerned have never met. Did you know that? No, of course not. But men know it. And the girl whose reticences have been long ago forgotten, whose reserves are gone forever, needs no press agent to advertise the sad, sad facts. Men know, and profit by their knowledge.

Perhaps men are disgusted with themselves. It is a well known fact undenied by them that they are, but what of it? Does that excuse the girl who has helped to shatter their few ideals? Men blame the girl in about the right proportion to her guilt. And they regard the girl who kisses everyone, just about as enthusiastically as they do the one who always seems to need a shampoo. She does not just seem quite clean—and that is how this column sees her.

Smoking and drinking are habits few women seem able to acquire with grace. Most of the little girls who are seen smoking and drinking these days look, and usually are, very cheap indeed. And their escorts are the first to note their cheapness and be revolted by it. Perhaps it is the fact that they are aping the ways of others whom they believe to be "smart" that makes these poor little things seems so pitiful to real people looking on at them. Even those who themselves smoke and drink quite casually, and at ease, regard with real pity the little girl out with her young mechanic sweetheart, and disgusting him with her futile efforts to appear sophisticated with the aid of cigarette and a glass of gin. Be yourself. Be just a nice litle girl and a nice little wife who will get up when the alarm goes off and hustle the breakfast. You are not Lady Vere de Vere, and probably would hate it if you were. You are just a nice youngster, who still thinks the family towels is all right. When you get over that idea you will probably make a god wife for some good man. Was there anything you wanted to know?

This column is for you. Your experiences and suggestions will help those who read this page. Express your views and help those in need of advice. You need not sign your name.

"A New Discovery?

★ Look for the Red, White and Blue Package

As a Change from Potatoes

"CAN'T you guess? Why, it's just the leavings from yesterday's dinner! But I'm serving it with MUELLER'S SPAGHETTI! Another of those simple MUELLER recipes."

Varied Menus at Low Cost

That's one of the economy-points about MUELLER'S MACARONI PRODUCTS. Many a leftover food item would be discarded altogether, except for the splendid combination it makes with MUELLER'S ELBOW MACARONI or SPAGHETTI.

Here's the recipe—and there are scores of others, easily prepared:

SPAGHETTI
With Leftover Meat

1 package MUELLER'S SPAGHETTI, ½ cup leftover meat, 2 cups gravy, ½ onion, chopped, 1 tbsp. melted butter, ½ tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, 1 cup grated cheese, buttered bread crumbs. Parboil the spaghetti for 7 min. in 4 qts. boiling water with 1 tbsp. salt. Drain, Mix the meat, chopped, the gravy, butter and seasonings. Combine with the spaghetti, and pour into a greased baking dish. Cover with the crumbs and bake for 20 min.

A Special Blend of Farina

The appetizing taste is due to the exclusive MUELLER processes, and the special farina-blend used in manufacturing. It seems to improve the flavor of anything else served in the same dish.

Light, Digestible, "Energizing"

The MUELLER processes assure quick and thorough digestion. No other spaghetti or macaroni cooks up so light and "fluffy," or so high in the food values that build new vigor and energy into the system.

Why not ask your grocer for a package of MUELLER'S MACARONI or SPAGHETTI today? He has it, or can get it for you.

52 TRAPPED IN RAID AS POLICE CAPTURE MONEY, DICE, SLIPS

HUGE CROWD ON HAND AS VICE SQUAD ACTS

42 Are Given Summonses to Appear in Court After Northwest Foray.

Five men were arrested on charges of permitting gaming, five others booked as United States witnesses and 42 additional men taken to the First Precinct Station and summoned to appear at a court hearing in a spectacular raid on third floor premises on I street northwest near Fourteenth street, about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The police vice squad, commanded by Sergt. N. O. Holmes and consisting of Sergt. George M. Little, F. A. Truscott and five other policemen, found a rather elaborately equipped gaming room, according to reports.

Police charge that blackjack and crap games were in progress and that equipment for making race bets was found. The seizure included $600 in cash, dice, cards and about 400 racing slips.

Large Crowd Sees Raid.

So large was the crowd in the place that the vice squad was forced to call upon five precincts, the First, Second, Third, Fifth and Eleventh, to furnish patrols to carry the men to the First Precinct station. The men were brought down from the third floor in groups of ten. Because the raid occurred at an hour when hundreds of workers were just out of offices downtown, the street around the establishment was lined with spectators who cheered and jeered the raiders at their work.

Those charged with permitting gaming identified themselves as George H. Johnson, 54 years old, L street northwest near Fourteenth street; Ralph C. Russell, 32 years old, P street northwest near Seventeenth street; Percy May, 30 years old, Cedar street, Takoma Park, D. C.; John L. Robinson, 28 years old, Eighteenth street northwest near Florida avenue, and Jack Turner, 32 years old, H street northwest near Sixth street.

Booked as Witnesses.

Those booked as Government witnesses were George S. Cook, 31 years old, I street northwest, near Thirteenth street; Gus Parris, 31 years old, Fourteenth street northwest, near H street; Pete Taulelle, 50 years old, Sixth street northwest, near D street; John J. Giblin, 48 years old, L street northwest, near Fifteenth street, and Jacob Schick, 54 years old, R street northwest, near Eighth street.

The other 42 men were released after receiving summons to appear for the hearing in Police Court today.

Veteran Circus Man, 81, Dies.

Month-Old Baby Girl Found on Door Steps

Sheltered in neat clothing and heavy blankets from the chilling blasts which swept across the Virginia hills last night, a month-old baby girl slept peacefully on the steps of the home of Mrs. Paul Twine, Colonial Terrace in Fort Meyer Heights where she had been abandoned, until Mrs. Twine came home to discover the bundle at her door.

Unrolling the blankets to find a curly-headed youngster inside, Mrs. Twine took the child and a black traveling bag, also left on her steps to the home of a neighbor, Maj. Maxwell Keeler. Maj. Keeler immediately notified Sheriff Howard B. Fields, of Arlington county.

The sheriff dispatched Mrs. Mae Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare and Deputies Hugh Jones and Roger Orrison to the scene. They were unable to find any clew which might reveal the baby's identity so the child was taken to Georgetown Hospital by Mrs. Jacobs where it was reported in good health, despite its stay outdoors.

POSITIONS IN JEOPARDY

RIOTING ACCOMPANIES FALL OF BRAZILIAN GOVERNMENT

Although announcement was made at 10 o'clock this morning that the president had resigned, this setting off great demonstrations in the principal streets of the capital, it was learned tonight Washington Luis had not actually signed the decree.

He held out against quitting, insisting he would never leave the government palace unless bound and taken by force. That the government had fallen, however, not even the foreign office questioned. Only one thing remained and that was the formality of the president's signing on the dotted line. As he sat in his palace the building was surrounded by troops loyal to the new revolutionary movement.

President Asked to Resign.

This tonight generals of the army were provisionally in charge of the capital of the greatest country in South America, apparently with the entire army and navy behind them. Three generals, Leite de Castro, Pantaleao Telles and Mena Barreto comprise the junta and will control the government until they are able to confer with representatives of Rio Grande do Sul, Minas Geraes and other states which opened the revolt three weeks ago. They hope as a result to establish a civil government.

Two new officials already have been named—Gabriel Bernardes, as minister of justice, and Col. Sotero de Menezes as chief of police.

The best information regarding the coup d'etat is that two generals, two admirals and Cardinal Leme went last night to Guanabara Palace, residence of the president, and urged him to resign.

Rioting in Capital.

The president refused, so at 2:30 o'clock this morning the entire force of military police was aroused to throw a guard about the palace. They surrounded the Botafogo District, which prevented most of the American business men living in the Copacabana area from reaching their offices.

With this show of force the president again was asked to quit. He refused and was given until 11 a. m to do so, but he still held out.

The rioting and arson developed about 10 o'clock this morning, with news that Washington Luis was out. Prior to this time all traffic had been operating normally except in the vicinity of the presidential palace, but with this news masses of citizens flocked into the streets and blocked the progress of buses, private cars, and all other vehicles.

Carnival Spirit Prevails.

Shouting against everything connected with the Washington Luis regime, the angry crowds wrecked and burned five newspaper plants and the government news agency. One paper was the Jornal do Brasil, among the largest in the country.

Fires were set in other places also and some shops were looted, but by night time the police apparently had stopped all violence. The carnival spirit was still evident, however, with hundreds of persons wearing badges of red cloth or carrying red flags to show their sympathies were with the Liberal party and not with the fallen government.

The coup had been expected for 24 hours, for despite the strictest sort of governmental censorship it was known that only the federal district and the State of Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo were loyal to Washington Luis. Everything else either was in the hands of the revolutionary armies, or else controlled by neither side, as in the State of Bahia.

Formation of a local government is expected tomorrow, and the effervescence of the situation will probably subside quickly.

Gen. Hastimphilo de Moura, commanding federal soldiers in Sao Paulo, is believed to be planning to push out patrols gradually to take over actual control of the city and its environs. He says he is without instructions at present.

If fighting starts, however, he will ask orders from Rio de Janeiro. The police are cooperating with the troops.

One Paper Published.

Only one afternoon paper was published today, Diario da Noite, which announced the victory of the revolutionary movement in Rio de Janeiro.

Leaders of Junta.

Announcement of the formation of the junta was sent out by the department of the interior and of justice to all points in territory controlled by the federals, including Sao Paulo.

Gabriel Bernardes, appointed minister of the interior by the junta, officially stated that the government of Brazil was in charge of a junta provisionally headed by Gen. Menna Barreto, Gen. Tasso Fragoso, Admiral Noronha and Dr. Pandia Cologeras.

Gen. De Castro and Gen. Pantaleao Telles, with Gen Barreto are the most active atnd influential leaders of the junta.

Sao Paulo, Brazil, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The commercial metropolis of Brazil, the "Chicago" of South America, was a city without a government tonight through the overthrow of the administration of President Washington Luis in Rio de Janeiro.

Sao Paulo Tranquil.

Advices from the federal capital announcing the formation of the military junta that has taken over the remnants of federal power were received late this afternoon, but the officials to whom they were directed all had fled.

The government palace, on which the federals ran up the white flag after firing occurred this afternoon, was deserted except for its guard of troops. Officers and men mounted guard, but without knowing why or from whom to take orders.

At 8 o'clock tonight heavy patrols of soldiers were guarding the streets of the city, which was tranquil and orderly. Fires still burned in places where newspaper offices had been burned during the day by the populace.

Police Aiding Troops.

Outside the central portion there was heard from time to time desultory firing, but no casualties were reported. During the brief period of shooting in the center of the city this afternoon traffic disappeared from the main streets. The automatic traffic lights continued to work, but the thoroughfares were empty.

Baltimore, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Glenn L. Martin, head of the airplane manufacturing company bearing his name, said today that the overthrow of the Brazilian government would not affect the shipment of three bombing planes to Brazil. The planes, which are flying boats, were ordered by the former Brazilian government at the contract price of $270,000. The planes are the last of an original contract for 30, given by the United States Navy, and permission was given by the Navy Department to send them to Brazil. The shipment is to leave here Monday on the deck of the steamship Atalavia.

War Planes Shipped.

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Ten large biplanes of a type originally designed for the United States Navy, bought by the Brazilian government, which fell today, for use against the revolutionists, left for Rio de Janeiro this morning on the liner Western Prince.

The Curtiss-Wright Corporation, builders of the planes, said they had been paid for and that delivery, so far as the company was concerned, was completed when the planes were placed aboard ship.

The planes are Curtiss Fledgelings, designed in competition for navy contracts. They were originally intended for training planes but are adaptable for use as bombers or fighting ships.

U. S. EMBARRASSED BY BRAZILIAN COUP

President Luis was a prisoner and that Rio de Janeiro was in the hands of a military junta of five "responsible officers."

His cable follows:

"A military junta consisting of Gen. Tasso Fragoso, Gen. Menna Barretto, Gen. Firmino Borba, Gen. Pantaleao Telles, Gen. Leite de Castro, responsible officers of long service well known to me personally, has been formed and has taken over the government and is establishing normal conditions which have been only slightly disturbed.

President Is Prisoner.

"The president remains a prisoner in the presidential palace. Popular enthusiasm is being expressed in a carnival spirit. The offices of late government newspapers have been sacked and a building, the property of O. Paiz (a Rio de Janeiro newspaper) has been burnt.

"Red flags have been displayed, but they indicate revolution and not communism. An army detachment has occupied the Bank of Brazil to protect it and the national funds deposited there."

If the same policy is followed as was followed in the case of the recent revolutions in Argentina, Peru and Bolivia, the United States will recognize the new government in Brazil just as soon as it is unquestionably in control, and has promised to fulfill its international obligations and to regularize its status by holding a popular election.

The United States was on the friendliest terms with the Brazilian government that has just fallen. Whether a similar cordiality will exist between this country and the new government will depend upon the attitude of the latter.

Seen as Advantage to Both.

Recognition, of course, would be advantageous to both, for upon it hinges the trade relations between the two couhtries. Brazil is one of this country's best customers; the United States, likewise, is one of Brazil's best customers.

There is something like a half-billion American dollars invested in Brazil. Annually this country exports to Brazil goods valued in the neighborhood of $113,000,000.

The trade balance, however, is greatly in favor of Brazil. In 1926 Brazil sold in this country goods valued at $218,000,000. The United States buys about 75 per cent of Brazil's vast coffee crop and also a large part of its rubber crop.

Critics of the policy that Secretary of State Stimson has followed with regard to Brazil say that he committed a grave blunder by proposing an embargo on arms to the Brazilian rebels. In effect, they say, it amounted to intervention in a civil war. A wiser policy, they say, would have been one of "hands off."

Secretary Stimson stated that his policy was based entirely on international law.

"We are acting according to general principles of law," he said on Thursday. "Those principles declare that where we are in friendly relations through diplomatic channels with a government which has been recognized as the legitimate government of a country, that country is entitled to the ordinary rights of any government to buy arms in this country, while the people who are opposing and trying to overthrow that government and are not yet recognized as belligerents are not entitled to that right.

"It is not a matter of choice on our part, but is a practice of mankind known as international law. We have no personal bias and are doing nothing but attempting to carry out the law of mankind."

State Department's Attitude.

The attitude of Secretary Stimson and other State Department officials with regard to Brazil may be said to have been this: They looked upon the revolution as a struggle that had grown out of a long-standing rivalry between the two Brazilian states of Sao Paulo and Rio Grande do Sul, a rivalry based upon a fight over the presidency of the republic. The fact that one state resented the continuance in the presidential palace of men from another state, they feel, is no more of a moral justification for a revolution than the resentment of Massachusetts over a Virginia dynasty in the White House would be a moral justification for a revolution in this country.

And looking at it that way, the State Department saw no reason to regard the Brazilian revolution as anything more than an attempt to change a government by violence.

Consequently it decided to continue its good relations and good offices with the existing government in Brazil, even to the extent of placing an embargo on arms needed by the rebels. Had the revolution grown out of intolerable tyranny or brutality, the American policy might have been different, but the State Department had no information that any such condition existed.

There is no question but that the State Department was surprised at the sudden success of the revolution. What information it had been receiving—or, at least, what information it had been making public—all indicated that the rebels were in for a beating.

But the surprise of the State Department officials was as nothing compared to the surprise experienced by Ambassador do Amaral. When he was told the news, he said:

"How absurd."

Ambassador do Amaral, like Secretary Stimson, had not received official word of the rebel triumph late yesterday, and accordingly was making no comment as to his future plans.

Church at Funkstown Razed in $25,000 Fire

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 24.—Christ Reformed Church, in Funkstown, was destroyed by fire this afternoon with a loss estimated at $25,000. Funkstown, a town of 600 population 2 miles east of Hagerstown, was menaced for a while until two fire engines from Hagerstown prevented the fire from spreading.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The blaze apparently started in the basement. Funkstown installed a water system a few weeks ago. The fact that plenty of water was available prevented a more serious blaze, as a high wind was blowing at the time.

FLAGS OF HIS ARMY DRAPES LEE'S STATUE

Battle Banners Presented to Washington and Lee University by U. D. C. Group.

TO BE KEPT IN MUSEUM

Lexington, Va., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Robert E. Lee's recumbent statue tonight lay draped with the flags which Lee led to battle.

At the ceremony in the Lee Chapel today eight flags were presented by the United Daughters of the Confederacy to the trustees of Washington and Lee University, to be kept in the museum near the statue.

John W. Davis, Democratic presidential candidate in 1924, received the flags for the university trustees from Mrs. Charles G. Bolling, president of the Virginia U. D. C.

To the strains of "Onward, Christian Soldiers," the flags were brought down the aisle by eight Washington and Lee students, with Virginia Military Institute cadets as a guard of honor.

Mr. Davis, in accepting the flags commented on the speech of Charles Francis Adams, the elder in 1907 "Which stilled forever the tulmultuous clamor against the loyalty of Robert E. Lee."

"The flags were accompanied by a gift from Charles C. Pinckney, of Richmond, of two stands which he presented in memory of his late father who served under Wade Hampton.

Forty years ago the United States Government returned to the South all captured flags. Mrs. Bolling asked for some of them and the Canfederate Memorial Literary Society consented to give her eight for the chapel, and these were presented today.

Hergert G. Dollohite, of Mississippi, holder of the U. D. C. scholarship at Washington and Lee, served as corporal for the color guard. The other students were W. W. Fowlkes, Virginia; J. L. Strong, Arkansas; M. E. Porter, Georgia; T. N. Layne, Virginia; Reid McDougall, New York; Henry Waller, Oregon, and Harvard Smith, Tennessee.

GROVES' PROMOTION IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Commissioners Also Favor Elevation of Lee to Lieutenancy.

NAME HAISLIP SERGEANT

Promotion of Lieut. Hugh H. Groves to captain was confirmed yesterday by the District Commissioners on recommendation of Maj. Henry G. Pratt, superintendent of police. The promotion fills the vacancy caused by the retirement of Capt. Fred M. Cornwell, who retires from active duty at the end of this month.

Sergt. James H. Lee was promoted to lieutenant and Private William D. Haislip was promoted to sergeant.

Capt. Groves was born on August 12, 1880, in Virginia, and was appointed to the police force on March 10, 1908. He served as foot patrolman, bicycle and horse-mounted private, and was promoted to sergeant on September 1, 1920. Subsequently he was assigned to motorcycle duty. He was promoted to lieutenant on September 16, 1925. Since November, 1925, he has served as night inspector.

Lieut. Lee was born in the District on March 23, 1877, and appointed to the police force on January 15, 1902. Commended several times for arrests in shooting and other affrays, he was named a sergeant on January 16, 1922, and has been commended several times since. He was one of the sergeants who were singled out for meritorious work and given an extra $5 a month pay.

Private Haislip was born in Virginia on July 19, 1892, and was appointed to the police force on March 1, 1919. He was injured several times in the course of duty as a motorcycle man and last year was commended for his work on a murder case. In September he was transferred to the Traffic Bureau. He, too, has been receiving $5 extra pay a month for efficiency.

Retirement of Private William E. Owen, who is 63 years old and has served in the Police Department for more than 38 years, was approved by the Commissioners on the recommendation of Maj. Pratt. Private Owen is assigned to the Eleventh Precinct and his retirement is effective at the end of the month.

Two Die as Plane Crashes in Paris

American Aviator, Citizen of France and Observer Are Killed.

Paris, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Gilbert Lane, an American aviator, and his French flying companion, Pierre Nicolas, were killed today when a plane in which they were taking off from Le Bourget for Cairo and Addis Ababa crashed and was destroyed by flames. They were going to Addis Ababa to witness the coronation of Ras Tafari as Emperor of Ethiopia.

The plane finally rose into the air and suddenly fell in a straight dive. Five houses took fire and the gasoline tanks of the machine blew up. Four dwellings were destroyed, but without other casualties. The bodies of the birdmen were unrecognizable when taken from the ruins.

Lane was a lieutenant in the American aviation service after the United States entered the World War and was decorated with the Legion of Honor military medal and the Croix de Guerre. It was at the end of the conflict that he was naturalized a French citizen.

Lane was said to have been the youngest aviator in the French army.

He was a member of American Legion Post, No. 1, in Paris, but members said they had no definite records of where his family might be found.

The accident occurred after Lane and his companion had spent some time in trying to get off on their long journey with a heavy load of gasoline and oil.

Trio Rob Mail Truck Of Bag With $17,000

Argo, Ill., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Three men robbed a mail truck today and escaped with a bag containing $17,000. Two blocks from the postoffice the truck was forced to the curb by a sedan, two men emerged with sawed-off shotguns and while one guarded Ralph Devee, the driver, the other sorted through the mail until he found the bag he desired. He tossed it into the sedan in which the third robber remained seated and drove toward Joliet.

Police officers said the consignment was of $17,000, but did not know whether it was cash or securities. The empty bag was found shortly after at a grade crossing.

2 Brides in Ambulance Are Killed in Collision

Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—An ambulance speeding to a hospital with two sisters, brides of a few months, collided with an automobile last night killing the two and placing a third woman near death. The ambulance was carrying Mrs. Mary Emch, 18, and her sister, Mrs. Ethel Langerman, 19, when it struck an automobile in which Mrs. Anna Clark, 42, was a passenger.

The two sisters, already near death from burns suffered in an explosion, were pulled from the ambulance as it burst into flames. Mrs. Clark was hurled into the side of a building and it is feared she will not live.

Man Shoots Wife Dead, Believing Her Burglar

Orlando, Fla., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Ora M. Parker, of Forest City, a town near here, mistook his wife for a burglar and shot her to death in their home last night.

He heard a noise in the house and went to investigate. Seeing some one moving about in the semidarkness, he fired. A woman fell with a scream. Lights were turned on, revealing his wife dead on the floor. A coroner's jury exonerated him today. A daughter, Helen Parker, lives at Hartford, Conn., and a son, Harry, is stationed with the Navy in California.

Police Commissioner Doubts Diamond Story

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Police Commissioner Mulrooney took his chief detective up to Welfare Island today to talk to Jack (Legs) Diamond about the bedside story the gangster told District Attorney Crain as his own account of how four strange men shot him without reason in the Monticello Hotel October 12.

"The story is full of holes," the commissioner said. Diamond, his doctors said, was recuperating satisfactorily.

Behind the Screens

By NELSON B. BELL

It was immediately apparent from the attitude of the audience at the National Press Club's midnight screening of "Check and Double Check," at RKO-Keith Theater Thursday night, that Freeman F. Gosden, otherwise Amos 'n' Andy, have a ready-made public eagerly awaiting the opportunity to revel in anything they may see fit to do in the guise of motion picture, instead of radio, stars. Their familiar—and sometimes far-fetched—mutilations of the English language were invariably anticipated by those in attendance, just as the transparent developments of the plot could be foreseen far in advance. The fact that they had guessed what was coming next only seemed to whet the auditors' appetite for further exercise of their prescience. Frequently it was impossible to hear the line when it was finally spoken because the audience had beaten the actors to the punch.

The same thing precisely was true last night when another midnight preview audience, that had bought every inch of available space in the theater on the reserved seat basis, enjoyed the privilege of meeting their favorites of the air face to face.

This is a salutary sign from the viewpoint of potential earning capacity. My guess would be that it insures so generous a box office "take" that so far as revenue is concerned "Check and Double Check" is in the bag.

As a matter of fact—and I have no intention of comprehensively reviewing the picture any earlier than tomorrow's issue of The Post, by the way—neither of the boys can act. Freeman Gosden, in the role of Amos, still has the better dialect of the two, but neither registers with such sharp definition as through your receiving set, by reason, no doubt, of the necessity of working farther away from the microphones. Correll, built up to his partner's height, displays by far the greater facility in pantomime and facial play. No matter what the mood, Gosden always gives the impression that he is laughing.

And another thing. No matter what your preconceived notion of the general appearance of the Harlem offices of the Fresh Air Taxicab Co. may have been, the picture is going to supply the setting in which you will inevitably see Amos 'n' Andy in your mind's eye from now on—with Madam Queen's beauty establishment in plain view across the street, but Madam Queen never becoming visible any more than she has ever become audible over the air. Or Ruby Taylor, either.

This circumstance in itself, it seems to me, will be a great fillip to the future broadcasts of this fabulous pair.

It just goes to show how thoughtless some of the big shots are. A few—or maybe it was a good many—months ago, Jack Connolly, then the European Pooh-Bah of the Fox Movietone News, coaxed George Bernard Shaw before the microphone and camera for one of the most engaging personality studies the reel has ever been able to boast, taking rank with the recording of King Alfonso XIII of Spain as one of the real achievements of the new sound era.

This week along comes the Irish author, playwright, and wit in another four minutes of "interview" that closely approximates his first in interest, and nobody even so much as suspected he was in there until the release was run off in the theater yesterday for timing prior to the first show.

Boy, wake up Mr. Glendon Allvine, Mr. Vic Shapiro, or any of the Fox publicity boys with a typewriter, fountain pen or Eversharp!

Harking back to the "Check and Double Check" engagement at RKO-Keith's for a moment, it might be well to check and double check the "Film Time Tables" in another column of today's issue before leaving home for the theater. They are giving seven shows a day, instead of the customary six, and that makes a difference in starting time.

And if you would relish a seasonal item, there is some of the fastest and best-pictured football ever embodied in a football story being run off in "College Lovers" at the Metropolitan. Even if you do not care for the game, you will get a kick out of the crowd in the bowl. The rooting sections alone are each about the size of Rhode Island.

Incidentally, if that physical resemblance can be taken at face value and the similarity of voice is as marked as I think it is, I would hesitate to wager anything beyond a thin dime that Sylvia Sidney, in the Vitaphone Variety, "Five Minutes From the Station," with Lynn Overman and Burton Churchill—also on the Met's new bill—isn't a sister of Nancy Catrroll's.

There were twelve—count 'em, twelve—sons and daughters in that La Hiff family, and this might well be one or another of the eleven others.

The newsreels for the new week are featuring a lad by the name of Richards, if I remember correctly—and I probably don't—whose claim to fame and a stomach acht rests upon the inability of the world's strongest men and meanest punchers to knock him either down or out with a body blow.

After socking away right lustily at his midriff until punch tired themselves, a dozen or so huskies take running jumps upon his stomach while he lies prostrate on his back on a hard roof. To top off the demonstration of durability, big Jess Willard, former heavyweight champ, hits Mr. Richards—it still seems to me that was it—wholeheartedly in the solar plexus with all of whatever might he may have left, with no appreciable effect whatever.

I was just thinking what a tough time Mr. Richards—or was it Throckmorton, or something (pronounced "Chumley")—would have kicking about Mrs. Richards'—unless it was Higginbotham—biscuit and trying to make it stick!

"Yes, Buddie Messinger dropped in, just as he said he would, but there isn't space left to tell you about it now.

Wait here a minute!

Reserve Bank Aid Succumbs to Burns

Injuries Received When Home Was Destroyed Prove Fatal.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Injuries received in the burning of his home here early yesterday caused the death today of Creed Taylor, 43-year-old deputy governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

The banker and two other persons in the Taylor residence were injured in the fire which destroyed the house before daybreak. Mr. Taylor and his daughter, Miss Marguerite Taylor, were rescued by firemen from a second-story window, but not until he had received severe burns.

His son-in-law, Culver Caraway, was burned about the hands in beating out flames which enveloped Mr. Taylor. Taylor's 7-year-old son, Creed, jr., was slightly burned.

Suicide Verdict Found In Atlanta Man's Death

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—A coroner's jury this afternoon brought in a verdict of suicide in the death of Charles Cecil Case, Atlanta engineer and building contractor, whose body was found on the banks of Peachtree Creek early today with a bullet wound in the head.

Police were told he had been despondent because of ill health but friends at the inquest suggested death by some means other than suicide, in testimony that a watch and valuables which Case habitually carried were missing when the body was found.

Technician in Radio Station Electrocuted

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Voltage that sent a radio broadcast through the air took the life of Lemoyne B. Cornelius, technician of Station KMAC, as he supervised the transmission on top of the Blue Bonnet Hotel here today.

A. S. Bessan, announcer, went to the operating room when advised that the program was not on the air, and found Cornelius' body slumped in a chair. Investigators found a wire carrying 3,000 volts a few inches from Cornelius' hands.

2 Beat and Rob Father Of Senator Barkley

Paducah, Ky., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—John W. Barkley, father of United States Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, was knocked down and robbed by two Negroes at his home here last night.

The men rapped at his door and one of them asked for a match when Mr. Barkley opened the door. As he turned to get the match they attacked him. They escaped with $1.15 in cash.

FEDERAL GUNS STOP TWO LIQUOR BOATS

Coast Guard Nabs Sixth and Seventh Craft in Week Near New London.

FOUR MEN ESCAPE HURTS

New London, Conn., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Guns aboard Coast Guard vessels blazed away today in a hectic battle, fought in the darkness of early morning, with two suspected rumrunners.

With five craft already to their credit as the result of previous encounters earlier in the week, the coast guardsmen in today's engagement riddled the liquor-laden speed boat Helen of Newport with machine gun bullets and one pound shells and captured a second speed boat, the Pueblos, of Bridgeport, believed to be a sister ship of the Helen.

Carrying a liquor cargo of 1,000 cases and manned by a crew of four men, who escaped injury, the Helen was beached after service vessels had pursued her in Long Island Sound. Coast Guard officials tonight were arranging to have her cargo transferred to the local base and to have her refloated if possible. The Pueblos was brought here for examination.

Wednesday night a speed boat also bearing the name Helen and also laden with liquor was beached and deserted by her crew about 20 miles from the scene of today's battle, after she attempted to escape the gunfire of service vessels. This boat was refloated today and brought here with her cargo to be surrendered to customs officials at New York.

At least eight service boats engaged in today's battle with the Helen and the Pueblos. The boom of 1-pound guns and the rattle of machine guns awakened residents in Stonington, while beams of light from powerful searchlights aboard the service vessels could be seen from shore as they followed the flight of the speed boats. Coast guardsmen estimated that 500 rounds of machine-gun bullets and about 40 rounds of 1-pound shells were fired during the engagement.

Besides the two Helens and the Pueblos, coast guardsmen have captured four other craft since Wednesday, the fishing boat Liberty, with a cargo of 600 cases of liquor and a crew of four, and the speed boats Mary, Mohawk and Desiree.

GRAND JURY RAPS DETROIT OFFICIALS

Immediate Removal of Three Police Executives Asked in Report.

MAYOR DELAYS ACTION

Detroit, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Immediate removal of three high officials of the Detroit Police Department was recommended by the Wayne County Grand Jury today.

The officers cited by the jury are Robert A. MacPherson, deputy chief of detectives, whom Patrolman Adolph Van Coppenolle charged with plotting against Inspector Henry J. Garvin last winter; Inspector Norval Marlett, head of the Black Hand Squad, and Detective-Lieut. Max Waldfogel, also of the Black Hand Squad.

Although the jury appended no explanation to its recommendation for the removal of these officers the statement had the effect of reviving the whole matter of internal disorder in the police department, which was brought out following the shooting of Inspector Garvin last winter.

The only explanatory matter furnished by the jury read as follows:

"This Grand Jury is convinced that the above recommended charges should be made immeadiately and without waiting for the final report of the Grand Jury, which will be made later."

Circuit Judge Lester S. Moll, supervisor of the jury, carried the recommendations to Mayor Frank Murphy with whom the responsibility for action rests.

Mayor Murphy told Judge Moll he would take no action on the grand jury's recommendation until he had received a statement of explanation from that body. Judge Moll is expected to go before the jury again Monday with the Mayor's request for information.

WEST VIRGINIA DEFEATS GEORGETOWN IN NIGHT GAME, 14-7; NOTRE DAME 2-TO-1 FAVORITE; ARMY CHOICE OVER YALE

73,000 to See Pittsburgh Contest

Sutherland Bemoans Fact That Injuries Hamper Team.

Tough Game, Is Only Prediction Made by Rockne.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—A pigskin carnival such as Pittsburgh has dreamed of for years awaits 73,000 of the football faithful in the big Pitt cement bowl tomorrow—the clash of another legendary Notre Dame Eleven and the undefeated, unscored-upon Panthers, of the University of Pittsburgh.

The late Tex Rickard used to say that all he needed to assure his big fights of success was a robust ticket scandal. Today the harassed university officials, with the greatest throng in the history of Pittsburgh football already certain to pack the giant stadium, fought the problem of thousands of counterfeit pasteboards while scalpers easily demanded and received $25 each for stray tickets.

Not since 1912, when neither had the national reputations they enjoy today, have the elevens of Pittsburgh and Notre Dame battled it out, and it seemed today as though every sports-minded citizen of the coal and steel regions was willing to invest a pay check to be in on the struggle. Pitt authorities, who never before have filled the stadium, believed they could have sold 125,000 tickets for the game. As it is the gate receipts, with 68,000 seats selling at $3, will total over $225,000.

Pittsburgh Hampered By Injuries.

Pittsburgh will go into the struggle hampered by injuries, and the wailing of Coach "Jock" Sutherland throughout the past week of preparations has provided a melancholy undertone to the proceedings.

Sutherland has announced publicly, borrowing a leaf from Rockne's own psychology, that his team will be beaten by two or three touchdowns. All of the casualties are expected to be in there acting as though nothing were wrong with their physiques tomorrow.

The wagerers, too, have made Notre Dame a 2-to-1 favorite and general expectations are that the starting back field of the "Irish," consisting of Rockne's ace quartet, the Italian-Americans, Frank Carideo and Joe Savoldi, at quarter back and full back, respectively; Marty Brill, of German descent, at right half, and Marchemont Schwartz, another German lad, at left half, will provide Notre Dame with at least a two touchdown victory. In three games, played in 1909, 1911, and 1912, Pitt has failed to score on the Ramblers. Notre Dame won the first clash, 6 to 0, tied the second, 0 to 0, and won the third, 3 to 0.

Baker Likely to Start At Quarter.

Sutherland probably will start his captain, Eddie Baker, a fleet broken field runner, at quarter back with Warren Heller and Josh Williams at the halves, and Hood at full. A mixture of Rockne's first and second string lines, with Kosky and Capt. Conley on the ends; Culver and Kirth in the tackle; Kassis and Pierce, guards, and Yarr, center, probably will start for Notre Dame although any of the Norwegian master's pregame line-ups are subject to change without notice. Tully and Quatsie will start in the Pitt tackles with Lewis and Milligan, guards, and the junior star, Ralph Dougherty, at center.

Rockne's only prediction was for a hard game. "We may have an edge and we may not," he said. "This Pittsburgh team is one club that is always tough." But Sutherland seemed to have no illusions. He was dour and gloomy as he led his squad into the stadium for a final warm-up after Notre Dame had finished.

"With our full strength we might have a chance," he said. "As it is, we're due for a licking."

German Olympic Team Curbed by Finances

Berlin, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Because of Germany's financial stringency the prospect arose today that there would be a modification in her activities in the Los Angeles Olympiad in 1932.

The Reich government informed the German Athletic Union that the state subsidy for the meeting would be considerably smaller than it was for the Olympics at Amsterdam two years ago, and that the union must try to finance itself as much as possible.

The German Olympic committee will meet November 15 to consider the problem. Unless sufficient funds can be raised by public help only a small German party will go to Los Angeles.

PITT GETS BIG TEST AGAINST NOTRE DAME

Pitt's Panthers, conquerors of Syracuse, will meet Knute Rockne's rambling Notre Dame Eleven, victors over Carnegie Tech, this afternoon in Pitt Stadium. Above are some of the Panther stars who will try to stop Notre Dame's string of victories. Capt. Eddie Baker and Franklin Hood led the attack against Syracuse.

Lou Little Predicts Victories Today For Notre Dame, Yale and Vanderbilt

By LOU LITTLE
(Head Coach Columbia University.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Each week-end finds us reviewing games that have a very important bearing on the final selection of the leading teams of the year. To choose the winner of a game in which the two teams seem to have equal ability is quite some task, especially in this modern-day football. You never can tell what is going to happen.

There are several games scheduled for tomorrow in the four sections of the country that will practically decide the sectional championship. We might even go further by saying that the PITTSBURGH - NOTRE DAME game will not only decide a sectional championship, but that the winner will prove to be the outstanding eleven. If NOTRE DAME should win there is hardly a stumbling block to come, unless it should be NORTHWESTERN. I doubt if any of the other teams on the South Bend schedule will be able to defeat the Irish.

SELECTIONS.

HARVARD - DARTMOUTH—DARTMOUTH may win, but they will find plenty of trouble with the boys from Cambridge. ARMY-YALE—In spite of ARMY'S victory last week, YALE should win. PRINCETON - NAVY—Pretty much a toss-up, both teams trying to rebound. PRINCETON should win. PENNSYLVANIA - LEHIGH—Not much to it. Pennsylvania by a large score.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY-FORDHAM: This will be some game, FORDHAM to win. The Rams have a great line. ALABAMA-VANDERBILT: The best two teams of the South. Tough game. VANDERBILT by a close score.

PITTSBURGH-NOTRE DAME: It will be the game of the year. Very close, but NOTRE DAME to win. STANFORD - SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA: Another great game of the year. Intense rivalry. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA having the edge. TEMPLE-VILLANOVA: Both teams fighting for recognition. A close game, TEMPLE by a touchdown or two.

BOSTON COLLEGE-DAYTON: BOSTON COLLEGE will not lose two in a row. BROWN-HOLY CROSS: BROWN should win by a touchdown. CHICAGO-MISSISSIPPI: From all appearances the Southerners should win. GEORGIA-ALABAMA POLY: The boys from GEORGIA are too strong.

GEORGIA TECH - TULANE: GEORGIA TECH can hardly hope to win. TULANE by a couple of touchdowns. GETTYSBURG - BUCKNELL: In spite of GETTYSBURG'S good record, BUCKNELL should win. KANSAS-IOWA STATE: KANSAS too good for IOWA STATE. LAFAYETTE-WASHINGTON & JEFFERSON: W. & J. to win by a close score. LOYOLA-WESTERN MARYLAND: WESTERN MARYLAND without much trouble. MICHIGAN-ILLINOIS: MICHIGAN is moving too smoothly to lose. MICHIGAN STATE-CASE: An easy time for MICHIGAN STATE.

NEBRASKA-MONTANA STATE, Nebraska to win. NORTHWESTERN-CENTER, a breathing spell for Northwestern. OKLAHOMA-KANSAS AGGIES, Oklahoma should win. OREGON-IDAHO, Oregon. PENN STATE-COLGATE, Colgate too powerful. RICE-TEXAS, Texas without any trouble; here is a good team.

RUTGERS - DELAWARE, Rutgers should win by several touchdowns. SOUTHERN METHODISTS-INDIANA, Southern Methodists. SWARTHMORE-JOHNS HOPKINS, Johns Hopkins by close score. SYRACUSE-ST. LAWRENCE, just an easy day for Syracuse. TENNESSEE-NORTH CAROLINA, Tennessee, as North Carolina's line is too weak. TEXAS CHRISTIAN-TEXAS TECH, victory for Texas Christian. V. M. I.-MARYLAND, Maryland to win. WASHINGTON-CALIFORNIA, a close game, but California to win. WASHINGTON STATE-MONTANA, Washington State. CARNEGIE TECH-WESTERN RESERVES, a rest for Carnegie Tech.

$30,000 Pitt Tickets Counterfeit, Is Belief

Pittsburgh, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The belief that $30,000 worth of counterfeit tickets for the University of Pittsburgh-Notre Dame football game tomorrow had been printed was expressed today by Police Inspector James N. Hoey after the arrest of three men charged with selling them.

The last tickets for seats and standing room at Pitt Stadium were sold several days ago. Approximately 65,000 persons will witness the game.

Bail for Nathan Cherkos, Philadelphia, and Julius Foreman, Pittsburgh, who police claimed had counterfeited tickets in their possession, was set at $10,000 each at a hearing today. They were held for further investigation.

Apaches Entertain Richmond Semipros

Boasting of a number of former college stars, the Richmond Arrows will invade town tomorrow for a game against the Apaches, champions of the District of Columbia, to be played at Griffith Stadium in the afternoon. The tussle should draw a record crowd of independent football fans.

Some idea of the strength of the visitors may be gained by the fact that they turned back the fast St. Mary's Celtics of Alexandria, 13-6, just two weeks ago.

In an effort to bolster up his offense Manager Seymour Hall of the local champions announces that he expects to sign a well-known former quarter back who will make his first appearance at the game.

KNICKS DRILL TONIGHT.

The Knickbockers will drill tonight at 7:30 in preparation for their Sunday game against the Irvington A. C. to be played in Mt. St. Mary's Stadium in Baltimore.

Billy Petrolle Signs To Fight McLarnin

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Billy Petrolle, outstanding candidate for the lightweight boxing crown, today was signed to meet Jimmy McLarnin in a ten-round bout at Madison Square Garden November 21.

Petrolle replaces Justo Suarez, the Argentine, who was scheduled to meet McLarnin on that date, but was forbidden by a 60-day suspension given him by the New York State Athletic Commission. Suarez sails for his home in South America today.

Italy Demands Primo Decide Citizenship

Rome, Italy, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Primo Carnera, giant boxer now en route to Italy, will have to straighten out his citizenship and pugilistic status before he will be permitted to fight there, Signor Mazzia, secretary of the Italian Pugilistic Federation, said today.

"In 1929 Carnera had the card of our federation which was not renewed in 1930," Mazzia said. "We recognize the card of the National Boxing Association of the United States only when the boxer is American.

"It is logical that the giant fighter in order to reestablish his position in the federation must first announce definitely whether he wishes to be French or Italian and this time it is necessary to pass from words to deeds."

Association President Sued by Former Umpire

Milwaukee, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—J. A. (Jim) Murray, American Association umpire for fifteen years, filed suit for $25,000 damages today against Thomas J. Hickey, president of the baseball league. Murray charged he had been blacklisted by Hickey.

In the complaint, Murray quoted a paragraph from a letter he said he received September 18, 1929, from Hickey:

"Now, just read this letter over again so you can see yourself as I see you. And just remember I will work as hard from now on to keep you from receiving a position as I worked to secure one for you."

Murray charged that Hickey had engineered his discharge September 4, 1929, as umpire in the Three-Eye League by writing to Eugene Wylie, president, saying that Murray had refused to pay a debt he owed Hickey.

Although he applied for positions in all parts of the United States, he was prevented from getting work through Hickey's interference, Murray said.

M'CLURE TO REFEREE.

Ed McClure, former Georgetown player, who will officiate at today's battle between George Washington and Dickinson, will referee the St. Stephen's-Mercury contest in the unlimited section of The Post's 1930 Capital City League tomorrow afternoon on the Gonzaga Field.

Purdue High Hurdle for Wisconsin

Northwestern Plays Centre; 3 Teams to Be Idle.

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Two undefeated teams, Wisconsin and Michigan, each aspiring to championship honors, will crash into dangerously stubborn foes in the resumption of Western conference gridiron hostilities tomorrow.

Wisconsin will attempt to hurdle Purdue, 1929 champions, at Lafayette, while Michigan, the surprise team of the "Big Ten," will battle Illinois at Ann Arbor in a game that promises to attract 86,000 spectators. These two battles will be the only conflicts that involve the championship situation. Three other teams will take on non-conference opponents, while the remaining trio loaf.

The well-vaccinated Northwestern Eleven, with two victories already in the grip sack, will tangle with Centre College, which is still living on the traditions of its great team of other years. This game will be played at Evanston. Mississippi comes to Chicago with the prospects of taking a fall out of "Old Man" Stagg's luckless Maroons.

Indiana Faces Task In Methodists.

Indiana hits the trail into Texas for a game with Southern Methodist University at Dallas, and probably is going a long way from home to take a beating, if the Methodists play anything like they did against Notre Dame. Minnesota, Ohio State, and Iowa, will rest on their oars, if that is what football players do on off dates.

One of those old-fashioned, thudding games that football fanatics rave about appears to be in prospect on the banks of the Wabash with the powerful Badgers battling Purdue. Wisconsin seems to have another steam-rolling, scoring brigade similar to that of 1928, which included Notre Dame among its victims. Pennsylvania rumbled out of Philadelphia a week ago, rated as one of the important elevens of the East and went home soundly thrashed, 27 to 0. Wisconsin did the same thing to Chicago a week previous. The edge favors Wisconsin, because of its reserve strength and its back-breaking offensive power.

Purdue Looms Strong Against Badgers.

Purdue, which lost a heart-breaking 14-to-13 game to Michigan, has proved to be stronger than it looked at first, and gives indications of giving Wisconsin a terrific battle. The return of George Van Bibber, the star tackle, and Jack White, the Boilermaker quarter back, to the ranks had stiffened the morale of coach Noble Kizer's warriors.

Illinois will be more than anxious to ruin the Michigan home-coming, just as Northwestern spoiled the Illini's by burying them under a 32-to-0 score. From every standpoint, however, the situation looks in favor of the Wolverines. They got going after a poor start and walloped two of their most dangerous foes, Purdue and Ohio State. Player for player, the Michigan aggregation seems to have the class. Coach Kipke, of the Wolverines, has plenty of reserves for every position, and possesses an outstanding star in Harry Newman, the sophomore quarter back, who has twice tossed Michigan into the winning column with sensational passes. Against Ohio State a week ago he completed a 53-yard toss which is something that has not been done for Michigan since the days of Benny Friedman.

Maryland's Harriers Beaten by Va. Poly

Special to The Washington Post.

Blacksburg, Va., Oct. 24.—Running almost a full minute ahead of the field, Capt. Johnny Miles led V. P. I.'s cross-country runners to a 21-to-35 victory over University of Maryland in the opening meet of the season here today. Running over a cold, wind-swept course, the Polytech distance ace covered the 5.2 miles under wraps in 29 minutes 19 seconds. V. P. I. placed fuor men the first five to enter, with Miles, four scoring teammates all within a span of 1 minute 10 seconds at the tape.

Order of finish: Capt. Miles, Tech; Shure, Maryland; Fisher, Tech; Carter, Tech; Elder, Tech; Cooper, Maryland; Hammerlund, Maryland; White, Tech; Mays, Maryland; Gentry, Tech; Duncan, Maryland. Nonscoring entries—Reichel, Maryland; Perrine, Tech; McGlathery, Maryland.

G. W. U. Bans 2 More in "Strike"

Freshmen Dougherty, O'Rourke Termed Sympathizers.

1931 Varsity Prospects Not Affected, Says Pixlee.

TWO more George Washington University freshmen were banished from the football squad yesterday and classed as sympathizers in the "strike" of six others who had demanded free board, lodging, and tuition. Four players whose status in the insurrection had been doubtful were cleared, Athletic Director James W. Pixlee announced.

The two latest players to be dismissed from the squad are Thomas O'Rourke, of Butte, Mont., an end and back, and Frank Dougherty, also of Butte, a full back and tackle. They made no attempt to declare their intentions or explain their absence from the practice on Wednesday and were presumed by Pixlee to be "strikers."

"Strikers" Refuse to Practice.

It was determined, Pixlee stated, that the four who had been cleared had satisfactory reasons for not reporting for practice on Wednesday when the demands of the disgruntled group were uncovered. The "strikers" first made known their feelings by refusing to dress for practice, and all other players who failed to report were then held by the authorities to be in sympathy with the "pay or no play" movement.

The six who were barred Thursday from further relations with the athletic department, and who have withdrawn from the school are: Carol Robinson, half back, of Salem, N. J.; Frank Walsh, half back, of Duluth, Minn.; Vance Jovick, end, of Butte, Mont.; George Venerosa, tackle, of Hazleton, Pa.; John Hofsess, half back, of Mexico, Mo., and August Newcamp, half back, of Erie, Pa.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university, yesterday announced that all of the disbarred players might remain in the institution provided they pay their own expenses. Also, Mr. Marvin declared, they are free to leave with no fear that the university will hold anything against them. Through this latter decision any of the group may enroll at another college or university with no mention being made to that school of his experience with George Washington other than the fact that he was a student.

1931 Varsity Prospects Not Affected.

Although the disbarred eight were capable players, their loss will not cause George Washington any embarrassment on the gridiron next fall when, by proper progression, they would have becomme eligible for varsity competition, Pixlee said.

"We will have all of this year's varsity men back next year, and the most these freshmen would represent then would be extra reserve material," averred the George Washington chieftain.

"I also want to make it clear that our freshman schedule for the year will be carried out. We still have fourteen players left in the freshman squad, and even if there were only eleven, sufficient to man a single team, we would go through with it."

Five games make up the Buff and Blue yearling schedule. Included are games with the Catholic University Freshmen and the "B" Squad of the Naval Academy.

Big Six Postpones Eligibility Probe

Columbia, Mo., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Investigation of charges into the eligibility of James Bausch, University of Kansas star athlete, were postponed today at the morning session of the Big Six Conference faculty representatives meeting here today and tomorrow, to create a code making uniform all athletic rules and regulations in the member institutions.

Pirates Retain Ens As Pilot, Is Indication

Pittsburgh, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—There were indications at Pirate headquarters today that Jewel Ens will be retained as manager of the Pittsburgh National League baseball club.

Ens, who arrived yesterday from Cuba, was called into conference by Owner Barney Dreyfuss who had as his guests President Sidney Weil and Manager Dan Howley of the Cincinnati Reds, here to see if something could be done in the way of a trade.

Following a long conference behind closed doors, it was announced there was "nothing to report," but it was learned Weil and Howley will remain here until the end of the week.

"FLUKE" TOUCHDOWN GIVES MOUNTAINEERS LEAD IN 1ST QUARTER

STAR OF GAME

EDDIE BARTRUG,
West Virginia half back, who led the Mountaineers to victory over Georgetown last night.

outgaining the invaders both over land and over head, but whenever it appeared the Hoya's were about to march to a score the gains were nullified by some one of the many bobbles already mentioned.

Then West Virginia launched its one and only sustained drive of the 45-yard line at the fag end of the third quarter and finishing over the goal line early in the final quarter with Bartrug scoring the touchdown on a 3-yard plunge off tackle. Again Bartrug place-kicked the extra point. Georgetown's hopes were dealt a death blow with this assault.

Throughout the game the kicking and running of Bartrug, a lanky youth whose spindle legs carried him marvelously fast, stood out like a skyscraper in Hyattsville. Eddie caught all eyes, sometimes caught Georgetown passes, again caught Hilltop runners but never quite caught his breath. He was that busy, and never once failed to do the right thing. So it was a whole-hearted cheer that broke from the stands when he was taken out for a substitute near the end.

FIRST QUARTER.

Score: West Virginia, 7; Georgetown, 0.

King replaced Scalzi and Georgetown received the ensuing kick-off. Georgetown, following an exchange of punts, gained 26 yards, Bordeau plunging 9 and E. Bozek catching a 23-yard pass from King to put the ball on West Virginia's 39-yard line. Doyle stopped the Hilltop advance by intercepting King's pass, and Bartrug punted to the G. U. 28. King took a pass from Leary for 11 yards for a first down on his own 39-yard line as the quarter closed.

Score: West Virginia, 7; Georgetown, 0.

SECOND QUARTER.

Maczees' punt was blocked, and West Virginia recovered on G. U.'s 35, but West Virginia couldn't gain, and Bartrug punted outside on the local 20. Maczees ripped off 19 yards for a first down on the Georgetown 39. Schwartzwalder intercepted a pass and Doyle passed to Sebulsky for 35 yards, placing the ball on the Hilltop 23. Bartrug attempted a field goal from the 16-yard line, but the ball went wide. Gillis replaced Bordeau and led a Georgetown parade to the West Virginia 48 from his own 20. A penalty, with plunges by Gillis and King, took the ball to the West Virginia 37. Another penalty shoved West Virginia back to its 23. Georgetown passed ineffectually, and West Virginia regained the ball on its 25. A penalty for clipping set the visitors back to their 10. Bartrug, on an end run, made up this loss. Bartrug punted and then intercepted a long pass from Maczees in midfield as the half closed.

Score—West Virginia, 7; Georgetown, 0.

THIRD QUARTER.

Landon School Wins From Woodward, 21-0

Landon School's rapidly improving football team performed well yesterday afternoon at Potomac Park when a second half drive swamped Woodward 21-0.

Using a continual spinner attack on Woodward's line, Landon's backs carried all before them in the second half after being held scoreless until the beginning of the third quarter. Woodward never threatened Landon's goal posts and rarely passed the middle of the field. Bill Baker, Al Seccomb and Harrison Prindle were the Landon threatmen contributing a goal apiece.

The final whistle saved Woodward from being scored on again, the ball being planted on its 1-foot line.

Brains Takes Opener From Guide Left, 30-to-1 Shot.

By J. B. SNODGRASS.
Special to The Washington Post.

THE Bowling Brook, for 2-year-olds bred in Maryland, proved a Waterloo for the favorite, Gigantic. Howard Bruce's Avalon, overhauling Spirit River, on the back stretch, took the lead under mild urging by Workman and won today's feature by two lengths. John A. Morris' Spirit River was second, three-quarters of a length in front of J. E. Davis' Gigantic.

Eight juveniles started. Avalon, a chestnut colt by Dunlin—Effort, was coupled with Royal Mystery, which was close up in the early running. Baboo also showed early speed, but tired. The time of the race was 113 flat, 6 furlongs.

There was little delay at the barrier. Gigantic was slow in getting away and lacked his usual snap under Ambrose's handling. The winning entry paid $6.80. There was a large crowd out today. The weather was disagreeably cold, cloudy and damp, though it did not rain.

Brains Beats Outsider In Opener.

E. R. Bradley's colt Brains won the opening dash for 2-year-olds with W. Cannon up. Mrs. John D. Hertz's Guide Left, the pacemaker, a 30-to-1 shot, was second, beaten a head, and Mine Sweeper, a field horse, was third, a half length back.

The large field was off to a good start. Guide Left leading and holding his position to the stretch, when he weakened slightly in the final strides. The winner paid $7.10. Ken Kling, equal favorite with the winner, finished fourth, closing much ground. The time was 1:14 2-5.

Ivory II Romps Home In Steeplechase.

Stephen Sanford's Ivory II won Dulany Valley Steeplechase, worth $2,000, with a fine exhibition of jumping and running, going to the front as his rider pleased, and winning by two lengths with plenty in reserve. Mrs. Robert McKim's Hoe-Cake was second, and Dr. J. Fred Adams' mare, Gracie, ridden by Rigan McKinney, was third. The Red Knight was fourth.

There was no mishap in the race. Jeffcot held Ivory II off the pace for the first mile. The Red Knight and Messmate II were the early pacemakers. Then Cawvoge went to the front, pursued by the Red Knight. Here Ivory II moved up to fourth, then second, and, turning into the stretch, went to the front. The winner paid $3.90.

Madder Leads Platers At Mile and Half.

Platers went a mile and a half in the third race: M. E. Thompson's Madder took the lead away from Vowed Vengeance at the half and went on about his business, winning by a length and a half in 2:38 1-5. Homelike was never farther back than third, and when Vowed Vengeance quit, McGinnis rocked along in second position to the finish, a length and a half in front of Magic Carpet. Proposal was fourth, Tall Grass, favorite, was never prominent. Tilden had the mount on the winner, and rode a well-judged race. The winner paid $7.

Toki Turns Tables On Gerard.

Mrs. J. M. Black's Toki turned the tables on Gerard, winning the fourth race and reversing the order of their finish the last time the two met. Toki, Robertson up, led all the way, having a margin of three open lengths over Gerard at the finish. Bluch Deenen, a field horse, was third. The time was 1:13 2-5 for six furlongs. The winner paid $6.60. Toki and Gerard were the two principally backed. Workman had the mount on Gerard. The start was good. Toki jumped out in front when the field was released.

Frumper Closes Fast To Win Sixth.

Ryland H. New's Frumper, an H. P. Whitney cast-off, came with a rush in the stretch to win the sixth race. Ormonbird was second and Vacation third. Vacation led to the backstretch when Yankee Doodle, which had been following the pace took the lead, but lost his advantage at the stretch. Frumper and Ormonbird moved up resolutely in the stretch, to cinch the first and second money. The time was 1:46 1-5 for a mile and a sixteenth. Frumper paid $24.90. Quackenbush put up a good ride on the winner.

My Scoop, the favorite, which paid $4.60 in the $2 mutuels, won the seventh race in a drive with Oakland by a margin of a length and a quarter, with Standard Bearer third, five lengths farther back. Nine platers started in the mile and a half test for 3-year-olds and up.

My Scoop, with Bruce up, was away from the barrier with Oakland in hot pursuit and the remainder of the field strung out. Brice sent My Scoop into the lead on the second turn out of the back stretch, and it developed into a two-horse contest from there to the wire. The winner finished with good courage. Do Tell, a 226-to-1 shot, showed surprising form to finish fourth, beaten a length for third money. Do Tell could not reach the leaders, but ran an even race.

Howard U. Entertains Livingstone Gridmen

Howard University Bison's are confidently expecting their first win in two seasons when they meet Livingston College, of Salisbury, in the Howard University Stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Their showing against the strong Institute team from West Virginia last Saturday, which indicated that the Bisons were much more powerful than last year, has given cause for expectation of victory.

Livingstone is regarded fully as strong an opponent as West Virginia, but it has no outstanding stars such as Edwards and Boxdale, who carried their team to a 7 to 0 victory last week. Howard has confidence in its aerial attack, and will probably, by Coach Verdell's direction, essay the air early in the game. Its brilliant showing in the second half last week, along this route, has determined this policy. The Bisons expect to win by at least three touchdowns.

IVORY II, reserved for the first mile, went to the leaders at the twelfth fence, gained command approaching the home stretch and, hard ridden, outstayed HOE CAKE. Latter worked his way into contention rapidly and closed with good speed. GRACIE, badly messed about from the start, took an in-and-out course, was blocked when making her run, was finally taken to the inside and closed fast. THE RED KNIGHT faltered after racing forwardly. CAWVOGE tired after a mile and one-half. OMAR ROMAR quit. FLITTERMAN refused at the twelfth fence.

IVORY II FLOATS OVER THE JUMPS TO WIN.

THIRD RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:45. Off at 2:45½. Winner, M. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MADDER, $7.00, $4.40, $3.30; HOMELIKE, $8.30, $4.80; MAGIC CARPET, $5.50.

MADDER followed VOWED VENGEANCE closely, displaced the latter after six furlongs, saved ground and held on tenaciously for the final issue. HOMELIKE, rated along early, responded when called on, reached the winner, but swerved to the inside and tired. MAGIC CARPET, reserved for the first mile, finished with good courage. PROPOSAL came with good energy in the final drive. TALL GRASS was always outrun. VOWED VENGEANCE stopped.

TOKI, going in her best form, sprinted into a commanding lead after the first furlong, saved ground and was never in danger. GERARD, kept close up, was unable to menace the winner. BLUCH DINNEEN, forced to race on the outside, finished steadily in the final drive. MISS PEGGY showed speed and held on well. PADDOCK was used up early. FAIRDALE went evenly. HOGARTY quit.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AVALON, $6.80, $2.80, $2.20; SPIRIT RIVER, $4.80, $2.90; GIGANTIC, $2.40.

AVALON secured clear racing room on the inside to assume command at the turn, was hard ridden thereafter and held SPIRIT RIVER safe. Latter, hurried along from the start, could not threaten the winner in the final drive. GIGANTIC, shuffled back early, finished strong when clear. DANCING MACK could not reach the leaders. BABOO quit badly after a short burst of speed. ROYAL MYSTERY stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:20. Off at 4:22. Winner, Ryland H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRUMPER, $24.90, $12.50, $6.20; ORMONBIRD, $4.90, $3.90; VACATION, $3.10.

FRUMPER improved his position steadily when settled on the back stretch, came around his opponents when forced to a drive, gained command at the final furlong pole and drew out thereafter. ORMONBIRD dropped back midway of the back stretch, went to the outside and finished resolutely. VACATION was made entirely too much use of being rushed and he weakened. YANKEE DOODLE had nothing left when the real test came. FAIR BETH was in trouble after the start.

OAKLAND, kept close up, gained command momentarily and held on with good courage. STANDARD BEARER closed stoutly. DO TELL could not reach the leaders. GOLDEN ARROW went to the post slightly lame. TUESDAY'S GAME.
Tech vs. Central.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

THE first two minutes of the game left the imprint of a 7-to-0 defeat on the collective features of a valiant Business High School Team yesterday, when it met Eastern in the latter's debut in the scholastic series at Central Stadium. Thereafter the luckless Business Team battled Eastern on even terms to no avail. Fifteen hundred shivering fans saw the game at Central Stadium.

Billy Wells, Eastern's outstanding ball carrier, gave his team the winning edge yesterday, and gave it to them almost before Business realized what it was all about. With scarcely two minutes of the battle under way—a two minutes almost exclusively devoted to fumbling—Wells got away for a twisting 30-yard run from midfield to Business' 20-yard line. Corridon battered through for another 6 yards. Then Wells stepped nimbly over a prone Business line for the touchdown. Corridon's placement kick barely cleared the cross bar.

Thus with the game scarcely under way Business found itself the underdog once more. Smarting under the handicap the Typists carried the play to their rivals during the remainder of the first and second periods.

Duryee Runs End For 25 Yards.

Duryee skimmed around left end for 25 yards late in the second quarter, a run that placed the ball on Eastern's 38-yard line and bid fair to be the opening chord to a tally. But here Business attempted the amateurish trick of depositing Johnson, an "injured player," well off to the side, who, when the ball was snapped, rose suddenly from his agony and received a long pass from Duryee. Business was penalized 15 yards on the play for having only six men on the line and the rally was dissipated.

The even tenor of the game continued through half of the third quarter until Business fumbled on its 35-yard line, Chalkley recovering for the Blue. Corridon hit the line well for 18 yards in two attempts. With the ball on Business' 15-yard mark Eastern was penalized 15 yards for holding.

Business Threatens With Passes.

Business forsook its tactics of simply holding Eastern scoreless late in the third quarter, when Bill Duryee heaved two ground gaining passes to Strasser and Jacobson. Then Jacobson in a clever pass formation shifted and nicked Eastern's weakened line for 10 yards. Business lost the ball on the enemy's 28-yard line on downs.

Corridon and Calevas carried the ball between them to Business' 12-yard mark in the final period, but Wells was thrown for a 10-yard loss by Bobby Cook, the Typist's center. Business held.

The game ended after Business had failed to capitalize on three fine passes from Duryee's arm.

V. M. I. Frosh Win By Margin of Safety

Lexington, Va., Oct. 24.—The Virginia Military Institute Freshmen defeated North Carolina State Frosh here today, 2 to 0. Kiken's punt, blocked on his own 10-yard line and recovered behind goal on third play of game, gave Cadets the only score. Law and Finlayson bore the brunt of the V. M. I. attack in the first half, keeping the ball in North Carolina territory. Wilson, Carolina half back, carried the ball to 5-yard line in three plays early in third quarter.

The V. M. I. line held and on first play Ferrell plunged through for 8 yards. The Cadet forwards stopped the Carolina running attack completely, but were unable to solve passing attack until last quarter. Ward, Cadet quarter back, broke up two Carolina passes on goal line. McClintage, substitute quarter back, kept State in scoring position during last half by his passing and running.

V. M. I. made seven first downs to four.

Royal Son Triumphs In Hawthorne Feature

Chicago, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Royal Son, a 5-year-old consistent gelding from the Valley Lake stable, proved the best of his field when he won the Clarendon purse, the attraction at Hawthorne today. Karl Eitel, from J. J. Coughlin's stable, was second and Ladrone, from Mrs. R. Pollard's string, was third.

The feature was an allowance affair for 3-year-olds and upwards and was run over the mile and a sixteenth distance. Royal Son crossed the winning line in 1:45 3-5. He paid off at $6.24 to $2 in the mutuels.

Royal Son was rated along in closest contention from the start to the stretch where he passed Karl Eitel to win in a drive by a length. Karl Eitel was sent out to set the pace right at the start and held the lead to the last furlong and was second by 2½ lengths. Ladrone raced evenly in third position and nosed out Seth's hope for third money.

Washington-Lee Loses to Fredericksburg, 19-13

Special to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 24.—Fredericksburg High School strengthened its claim to northern Virginia scholastic grid honors here this afternoon by defeating Washington and Lee High School, of Clarendon, by a score of 19 to 13. The Clarendon athletes won the State championship a year ago and were regarded as favorites to repeat.

A determined Frederick assault in the final period netted the victory. A forward pass, Lowery to Middleton, accounted for the Yellow Jackets' second touchdown shortly after the start of the quarter. In the waning minutes of play Goldy Lowery crashed through center for 8 yards and the winning marker. The Generals scored once in each of the first two periods.

—12Y—½NWMr.s. ccvN1 , m m m

Their first touchdown came as the result of an intercepted forward pass by Robertson and his 60-yard run which followed. In the second quarter Mortimer went off tackle for a score after razing 37 yards to put the ball in scoring position. Aside from the running of Mortimer, Lowery and Middleton, the outstanding line play of Billingsley, Fredericksburg end, was a feature. The Fredericksburg Eleven has won five straight agmes, and needs only to defeat Alexandria to gain undisputed possession of the orthern Virginia title.

Fishburne Primes For Lane High Game

Special to The Washington Post.

Waynesboro, Va., Oct. 23.—Disappointed and maddened by their failure to defeat Episcopal High School last week, the entire football squad of Fishburne Military School has been scrimmaging and drilling in signals with a determination to bolster the defense and offense for their game here Saturday with Lane High School of Charlottesville.

Because of injuries, it seems certain now that Capt. Turner and Dutrow, plunging full back, will be kept on the side lines Saturday. That there will be several important changes in Fishburne's line-up also appears sure, according to Capt. "Babe" Spotts, head coach.

Forsythe-Blackstone Trophy to D. C. Team

The golf team representing the District of Columbia Society of the Sons of the American Revolution yesterday won the prize known as the Forsythe-Blackstone trophy, presented three years ago to the national organization. The Pennsylvania Society has won the trophy during the past two years, but the net scores yesterday by the sixteen players who competed on the course of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps Club gave them the victory.

Play for the trophy began last May with each State society turning in the twelve best low net scores made by their players each month. In the competition yesterday the low net score was made by Capt. Hartrick, of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps Club, with 73. Capt. W. J. Clear, also a member of the club, but playing as a representative of the California Society, had 79 for low gross. Prizes for the best score for nine holes were by Dr. T. J. W. Brown and H. B. McCawley, with 38 and 36, respectively. High gross was won by M. L. Genung, with 95.

The prizes won yesterday, as well as the national trophy, will be presented at the next meeting of the District of Columbia Society on the third Wednesday in November.

Bozek ran the end for 10 and a first down on West Virginia's 18. Gillis gained 4, but J. Bozek fumbled. Scalzi passed to P. Mooney over the goal for a touchdown and drop-kicked the extra point.

Score: West Virginia, 14; Georgetown, 7.

Parriott reutrned the kick-off to West Virginia's 37. Parriott and Sebulsky made 9 between them and Georgetown bracked to take the ball on downs on West Virginia's 47. Two long passes were grounded and Sebulsky intercepted a third to run to G. U.'s 40 as the game closed.

Score: West Virginia, 14; Georgetown, 7.

ALABAMA FACES BIG TEST

Game With Vanderbilt Features Program in South.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The test of a trick, passing team (Vanderbilt) against a powerful, driving machine (Alabama) commands major attention in the South tomorrow as these unbeaten gridiron squads meet at Birmingham.

Five other undefeated conference elevens deploy against formidable circle opponents, but the early season strength shown by Alabama and Vanderbilt, headline contenders for the Dixie title, boosts their engagement to top position.

In downing Howard, Mississippi and Sewanee, and halting Tennessee's Volunteers after a 3-year winning streak, Wallace Wade's Crimson Team exhibited a running offensive as devastating as the championship Tuscaloose elevens of a few years ago.

Vanderbilt had little trouble beating Chattanooga, Minnesota, Virginia Polytechnic and Spring Hill, but only in the intersectional fray with Minnesota did McGugin's team show the power necessary to turn back a squad of Alabama's strength.

Vanderbilt Boasts Strong Line.

With a forward wall second to none in the Southland, Wade has used nothing but straight drives in winning his early victories. The Crimson have yet to reveal any deceptive plays or an aerial barrage. On the other hand, Vanderbilt is known to possess an overhead game that has brought consistent gains and a quartet of backs who do sleight of hand tricks with the ball to conceal it in a hurried get-away.

In practice scrimmages, Wade has used a six-man line, with a roving center as his best defensive measure against the expected bombardment from the air. Vanderbilt, 26 strong, left Nashville today.

In Atlanta, Tulane 1929 champions, engages Georgia Tech in the first defense of its crown. Tech already has won two intra-conference games but took an intersectional beating from Carnegie Tech, while Tulane lost to Northwestern. The Green Wave will present a 200-pound line against a Tornado forward wall that has proved an uncertain quality.

Kentucky, a real threat for Dixie honors, meets an improved Virginia Team at Lexington, Ky. Virginia lost to Duke, but beat V. M. I., in its two circle contests. Georgia meets a crippled Auburn Team in their annual engagement at Columbus, Ga., while Mississippi A. and N. beaten by three S. I. A. A. teams but successful in its single loop contest with Louisiana State, deploys against North Carolina State at Raleigh.

Tennessee and N. C. To Draw 20,000.

Although both have been beaten, more than 20,000 persons are expected to see Tennessee try conclusions with North Carolina at Knoxville. Carolina will be weakened by the loss of its best ground-gainer, Half Back Jim Magner, who was suspended for breaking training. Coach Chuck Collins refused a request from Tennessee that Magner be allowed to play. Neyland, Tennessee mentor, offers a revamped line and a starting back field without Buddy Hackman, one of the touchdown twins.

Maryland rules a slight favorite over V. M. I. and Louisiana State is figured stronger than Sewanee in other intraconference games.

Outside engagementa bring together Duke and Wofford, Florida and Furman, Virginia Polytechnic and Davidson and Washington and Lee and St. John's, of Annapolis.

Mississippi and Centre continue the intersectional challenge, Ole Miss facing Chicago and Center playing Northwestern at Evanston, Ill.

Alexandria High Wins Over Warrenton, 19-0

Special to The Washington Post.

Warrenton, Va., Oct. 24.—Alexandria High defeated Warrenton High here this afternoon, 19 to 0. Alexandria started their second team at the outset, and after a scoreless first quarter the regulars went to score one touchdown in the second quarter on a plunge by Travers.

In the third quarter this same Travers took a pass thrown from the 30-yard line and galloped 10 yards across the line for the winner's second score. The point after touchdown was made.

In the beginning of the fourth quarter Luckett got away for a beautiful 30-yard run for the third and last score of the game, the extra point not being made.

Luckett, Travers and Jennifer, who started for Alexandria, went out and returned later in the game, were the outstanding stars. Warrenton fought hard and Kirby, its red-haired half back, made some nice gains until slowed up with a leg injury. Tom Souders, at end, and King, at right guard, did good defensive work for the locals, Souders making some nice tackles of the fast visiting backs behind the line of scrimmage.

Bud Charlton Scores In Latonia's Feature

Covington, Ky., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Bud Charlton, the consistent 3-year old colt from the stable of F. M. Miller, was the best of the seven horses which started in the Dry Ridge Purse, the featured number on today's card at Latonia. Workless, from G. M. Hendrie's stable, was next best, with Fiddler, the heavily played favorite, from Gallaher & Combs' string, third.

The contest was a high-priced claiming affair for 3-year-olds and was run over the mile and 70 yards journey, being worth $900 to the winner. He covered the distance in 1:44 flat. But Charlton was rated along a length or so in front of the pack to the turn into the home stretch, where he was given his head and he increased his advantage, but tired in the final run and was doing his best to win by half a length. Workless, never far back, came very fast in the stretch and was pressing the winner to take second money by a head. Fiddler, the favorite, weakened after reaching closest contention and was third, four lengths in front of Chelys.

WINNER IN FIELD TRIALS

Frederick-Owned Pointer Outstanding in Field Trials

GRIFFITH HAPPY RAP, a pointer dog owned by Father J. T. Coolahan, of Frederick, Md., won first place and a silver service set for his master at the National Capital Field trials yesterday on the course near Centerville. Joe Brown, a pointer owned by R. R. Burnett, of Roanoke, was second and Sam Valients Boy, a setter owned by Ford E. Young, of Washington, was third in the all-age derby.

These dogs won over a field of 21 dogs and against exceedingly inclement weather. The high winds made the birds hard to find and several times the riders following the dogs flushed a covey of birds before the dogs scented them.

An amusing event of yesterday's trials, related by witnesses, was when Happy Rap was put down the judges lost sight of him and he disappeared. A ten-minute search was made for him and when found he was standing on point in a small thicket a short distance from where he was released. The dog did not move until his master had dismounted and flushed the birds. He was by far the most outstanding dog of the entire trials.

The Derby Trials were run Thursday. This event was won by a setter, Silver Speck, owned by Garnett King, of Fredericksburg, Va. Second, a pointer, Fashion Plate, owned by David Dolin, of Galax, Va., and third Florendale Louis Nugym, owned by Virgil Hawes, of Harrisonburg, Va.

The judges of the trials were C. B. Stickley, of Vaucluse, Va., and J. Lee Vale, of Vienna, Va. C. B. Cross, of Fairfax, acted as marshal of the hunt. The National Fields Trials Association is composed of bird dog owners of Washington and vicinity, with Thomas Baldwin, of Bradley Heights, as president and Ford E. Young, of Washington, secretary.

Among the owners entering dogs in these trials were: Capt. John Brodie, of Staunton, Va.; Dr. Garnett King, of Fredericksburg, Va.; E. B. Sterratt, of Nutley, N. J.; T. J. O'Donohue, of Goshen, N. Y.; A. M. Pullen, of Richmond, Va.; Father T. J. Coolahan, of Frederick, Md.; Virgil P. Hawes, of Staunton, Va.; E. R. Colbert, of Fredericksburg, Va.; A. W. Valentine, of Richmond, Va.; Dr. David Bohen, of Galax, Va.; S. D. Timberlake, of Staunton, Va.; Ford E. Young and Harry Latimer, of Washington.

Spanish Dancer, 6 to 1, Wins Empire's Feature

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Nelson A. Siel's Spanish Dancer, 6-to-1 shot, was a driving winner of the fourth race, a 6-furlong sprint, which featured a very poor day's race program. Genius was second and Panguitch third. The attendance at the hilltop track was kept down to the regulars. The cold weather, combined with a cheap race card, was the contributing cause of the poor attendance.

The start in the fourth race was bad, half of the field being left. Genius rushed to the front and set a stiff pace, leading by a length or so to the stretch, where Spanish Dancer closed with a rush and won in a drive by a head. Genius beat Panguitch four lengths for the place.

The time was 1:10 2-5.

G. W. Eleven Seeks Revenge From Dickinson Here Today

Colonials Intend to Use Open Football Against Team That Won Last Year's Contest by 7-6 Score.

FACING an opportunity to avenge one of many 1929 defeats, George Washington's Colonials meet the Dickinson College Red Devils in Griffith Stadium this afternoon, beginning at 2:30 o'clock. Dickinson defeated an inferior G. W. eleven last fall, 7 to 6.

The game, originally planned as a night contest, but which was recently switched to the afternoon because of Dickinson's urging, probably will see George Washington using the "open" style of attack which is spectacular. Forward passes, both short and long, and sweeping end runs are likely to be the order unfolded by the Colonials, who heretofore have employed more conservative tactics such as straight line bucks.

Dickinson, according to this year's scores, will be the underdog, but Coach Jim Pixlee has warned his charges against viewing the opposition lightly. If the local lads play their hardest from whistle to whistle they should handily gain the decision.

Pixlee Expects to Use Substitutes.

Pixlee is expected to use as many of his substitutes as the going permits, for he is anxious to determine exactly the value of his second and third string players. Later in the season G. W. will meet Catholic University, a traditional rival, and Navy, which ranks in a higher class, so Pixlee seeks to have his team at the peak by that time.

The Colonials have been working hard all week to perfect their passing and end-running plays. Pixlee was satisfied with the defensive ability they displayed against South Dakota.

Dickinson owns a capable back field, but has a line of uncertain strength. On the other hand, G. W. has a line that is relatively more proficient than its back field. George Washington will outweigh the visitors, 179 to 176, average.

The Red Devil backs include Don Casner, a 10-second man in track, who probably will be the fastest man on the field. Much of the success of Dickinson's attack rests in the ability of this speedy youth, who plays full back.

Bagranoff to Start In Back Field.

Coach Pixlee has again nominated Bert Bagranoff, 202-pound guard, to start in the full back position. This husky can hit the line with terrific force, his prowess in this respect giving the G. W. offense considerable versatility.

As Otts Kriemelmeyer, Washington boy, is the same type of back, the Colonials can constantly keep the Dickinson defense confused, for when the visitors concentrate for line plunges the locals can turn to passes.

Joe Carter, who made such a favorable impression against South Dakota, again will occupy the quarter back post. Billy Wells, who took charge of the signal calling after the first ten minutes of the South Dakota contest, will be held on the bench. Joe Carlin will pair off with Kriemelmeyer at half back.

MARYLAND U. HOPEFUL OF VICTORY

Old Liners Aiming to Avenge 7-6 Loss to V. M. I.

MARYLAND'S gridiron stalwarts will be battling to win their first Southern Conference victory of the season this afternoon when they meet the Cadets of V. M. I. in Richmond, Va. Many Old Line students and alumni are expected to make the trip to witness these two conference rivals in combat.

Thus far Maryland's season has not been successful in point of victories, but a lot of consolation for the beating at the hands of Yale and North Carolina can be had with a triumph today. Victory will be especially sweet to the Old Liners, as they dropped a heart-breaking 7-6 decision to the Cadets last year.

V. M. I. Lost Ten Letter Men.

In view of the fact that V. M. I. lost ten letter men by graduation without recruiting players equally as capable, and since Maryland is conceded to be stronger than in 1929, the prediction has generally been made that Maryland will win, possibly by two or three touchdowns.

V. M. I. was an overwhelming favorite a year ago, but Maryland proved soon after the start of the game that this reckoning was far from right. For the greater part of the game, Maryland held the lead, only a late touchdown with extra point pulling the Cadets out on top.

Virginia and Maryland Yearlings Clash Today

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 24.—Virginia's first-year team will play the Maryland freshmen tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, on Lambeth Field, for the entertainment of the home folks while the Cavalier varsity is in Lexington, Ky., battling the Kentucky Wildcats.

In the line of the young Cavaliers there will probably be Bence and Cutler, ends; McGuire and Berkevich, tackles; McGuire and Dial, guards, and Wager, center. The coaches are not certain who the back-field selections will be, but either Harris or Abramson will probably ran the team and Baird and Suddarth are likely to be in the line-up.

During the three seasons that Joe McConnell has been coaching the first-year team his charges have not been defeated on Lambeth Field. He hopes to hold to this record against the strong Old Line freshmen who won from North Carolina last week.

In their opening game last Saturday, the Cavalier first-year men defeated V. M. I., 18 to 6. Capt. Flock, tackle, was injured in this contest, and will not be in condition to play against the Maryland squad.

Quantico Marine Team Routs Fort Monroe

Special to The Washington Post.

Quantico, Va., Oct. 24.—The Quantico Marine Post Team continued its winning streak today, beating Fortress Monroe, 26 to 0, rolling its scoring total to 156 points against its opponents' 6. The Marines started a host of second and third string players, who filled the line-up except for a brief period of the game. The first touchdown was made by Dailey in the first quarter by a long end run. The two middle periods were scoreless. Butler, Dailey and Reslo went over in the last quarter for touchdowns.

A placement kick by Zeher accounted for one extra point and a drop by Diaz made the other. Dupler and Shew were very strong in the line. Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler led 2,000 Marines in the cheering. The Marines journey to Baltimore to play the Firemen November 1 and the proceeds will go to building a new school for the post.

STRONG RECOVERY STAGED IN STOCKS

All Groups Move Forward; Brazilian Coup Pushes Latin-Americans Up.

MONTGOMERY WARD OFF

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—The stock market selected the first anniversary of its 1929 explosion for another demonstration of its ability, upon occasion, to advance.

Aided by the optimism that emanated from the meeting of the steel producers and from a statement by a prominent figure in the automobile industry, the market rallied progressively throughout the day, stopping only momentarily when a mail order house passed its dividend, and then accelerating its advance to a strong close. Gains ranged from 2 to 9 points on a turnover of 2,763,000 shares, 800,000 of which changed hands in the last hour.

All groups participated in the recovery. Rails regained yesterday's losses; industries and utilities were strong. There may be further liquidation overhanging the market, but the shorts today did not appear so sure of this possibility and moved to cover in some force.

High grade domestic bonds steadied. Latin-American issues moved up briskly on the Brazilian coup, which many observers felt would clarify the situation in that republic. Grains eased slightly. Coffee futures broke a cent a pound but recovered. Cotton was again higher, rising 9 to 10 points.

The steel men expressed the opinion that the bottom of the depression was at hand, although they saw little prospect of much improvement until the first of the year. Several said price stability was the industry's most pressing need and some found that progress was being made in that direction.

The statement on the automotive business came from John J. Raskob, of General Motors, who said conditions were slowly returning to normal and that substantial improvement would appear in 1931.

Earnings reports from a dozen railroads showed September net of 10.2 per cent above the August figures, but 13.8 per cent under September, 1929. Weekly summaries of trade revealed some improvement, chiefly in retail buying which had been stimulated by cooler weather. Dun's noted "a slow and steady trend toward betterment" and emphasized the influence of "sales" on buying sentiment.

Thus the news of the day was largely constructive and the market chose to be cheerful. Steel shares went vigorously upward. The Van Sweringen Rails, so soft yesterday, led their group and most of the Thursday losses were regained. Nickel Plate, Erie and Chesapeake & Ohio gained 3 points, Chesapeake Corp. 5, Missouri Pacific and Alleghany Corp. 1, and Pere Marquette 8. Atchison and New York Central, with 5-point advances, were also prominent. Union Pacific and Northern Pacific rose 3 and Baltimore and Ohio 2.

U. S. Steel Gains 4 Points.

United States Steel pushed across 150 for a net gain of 4 points, and American Telephone got about 200 again. International Telephone, in sympathy with the rallies in securities, having Brazilian connections, advanced 3. General Motors' response to Mr. Raskob's statement was a 2-point rally. General Electric, Dupont, Westinghouse, Standard Gas, American Power & Light, American & Foreign Power, and American Water Works were up 3 to 5. Allied Chemical soared 9, Auburn Auto and Ingersoll Rand 6, Bethlehem Steel, Standard Oil of New Jersey and American Tobacco B 2, and Michigan Steel 8.

Montgomery Ward dropped to the new low of 20¼ on the omission of the dividend. Prior to the directors' meeting Wall street opinion had been divided as to whether the payment would be passed entirely or cut, and the action brought out considerable stock. At the closing price of 20⅝ the issue was off 3¼. Sears Roebuck sagged for a time, but recovered.

The day's losses in wheat averaged less than a cent. Selling was based on light exports and a bearish Argentine estimate. Corn also was off fractionally.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—An opening advance to approximately the 11-cent level for new December contracts met little more selling in cotton here today, but the offerings were absorbed on comparatively moderate transactions. After selling at 11.01 early, the new December eased off to 10.89 and closed at 10.94, compared with 10.84 at the close of the previous day. The general market showed net advances of 9 to 10 points on continued covering and trade buying.

The opening was firm at an advance of 11 to 19 points on a renewal of yesterday's buying movement, which probably found some additional encouragement in the steady showing of Liverpool and reports of unfavorable weather for the grade and saving of late cotton in the South. This advance carried the price of March contracts up to 11.35, or about 68 to 90 points above the low prices touched before the publication of the Government crop report on October 8. Increased offerings were encountered at these figures, while the more urgent demand appeared to have been supplied, and fluctuations later in the day were more or less irregular. In addition to realizing there may have been some local selling for a reaction following the advance from recent low levels, after easing off to 11.24 for March and 11.45 for May contracts prices steadied up again on covering, closing at rallies of 5 or 6 points from the lows.

There were reports of further cold rains in the South, with killing frost at a few points in Arkansas and with further frost predicted for the north central sections of the belt. These may have contributed to the opening steadiness, but there was more tendency to emphasize the firmer showing of Liverpool and reports of a continued steady spot situation. Covering was reported a little less active after the buying of yesterday, but local brokers reported considerable trade and commission house buying on the setback. Trading in the current October contract ended at midday, the last sale reported being at 10.89.

Liverpool cables said the advance there was due to continental and Bombay buying, combined with covering and trade calling, and reported a fair business pending in cotton cloth and yarn. Exports today, 37,655, making 2,000,812 so far this season. Port receipts, 93,280. United States port stocks, 3,410,876.

BRAZILIAN BOND LIST GAINS AS SALES RISE

RAILS CONTINUE TO LOSE

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Latin-American issues received new impetus today from the news that the revolt in Brazil had been successful. Apparently interpreting the overthrow of the government as a step toward stability in the South American republic, traders were very active on the buying side.

Brazilian government, state and municipal bonds registered gains ranging as high as 11 points. Other Latin-American issues participated in the advance to a more moderate degree.

Liquidation of domestic bonds dwindled and the best grade issues reflected a better tone although the continued decline in railroad bonds gave an irregular appearance to the group. Much of the improvement was attributed to the strong recovery of the stock market.

Prominent in the advance were the same Van Sweringen railroad and holding company bonds that broke sharply in the previous session. Convertible issues were the largest gainers.

C. & O. 5s Advance.

Alleghany Co. bonds of 1944, 1949 and 1950 rebounded 6 to 8 points. It became known that the company has on deposit as collateral securities whose value is more than 200 per cent of the value of the bonds outstanding while the indenture requires only 150 per cent. Chesapeake Corporation 5s advanced 3.

Mortgage issues of the group were irregularly higher. Missouri Pacific 5s rallied more than 2 points, and the 4s gained ¾. Chesapeake & Ohio bonds were firm. Nickle Plate and Erie bonds were mixed. Erie 5s of 1967 and Nickel Plate 4½s A reacted to new 1930 lows.

While there was some question of how the fall of the Brazilian government would be interpreted in financial circles here, it proved a bullish factor as it was recalled that the revolutionaries had previously announced they would stand behind the obligations of the government to foreign creditors.

Changes in Brazilian List.

Brazilian governments were very strong. The 8s advanced 5 points to 80, up 19 from its year's low reached shortly after the revolution broke out. The 6½s were up about 2. Rio Grande do Sul 7s and 8s rallied 3 and 4 points. Minas Geraes 6½s soared 10½. Pernambuco, Rio de Janeiro, Antioquia bonds joined the advance. Sao Paulo 7s moved up 11½ for the largest gain of the day.

Argentine, Chilean and Colombian issues were in demand. Peruvian governments reached 1 point and Buenos Aires 6½s sagged 5 to a new year's low. In the domestic list such issues as American and Foreign Power 5s, and International Telephone 4½s, bonds of companies with large interests in South America, advanced ¾ and 1¾ respectfully.

European bonds were comparatively dull and most of the activity was concentrated in a few government issues. Italian 7s and German Municipal and Industrial issues were higher.

There was a moderate inquiry for prime bonds and many registered fractional gains. An easy tone influenced railroad issues ranking below the best. Chicago and Eastern Illinois 5s gained 1¼ coincident with the announcement of the president that funds for payment of interest charges due November 1 had been set aside. Stock privilege and speculative bonds reflected the better tone of the share market. U. S. Governments moved higher on active buying.

EXCHANGE CHARGES COMMITTEE NAMED

Bank Auditors' Group Will Study Cost of Handling Various Drafts.

TRACTION LINES REPORT

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

It will be for the District of Columbia Bankers Association to decide whether exchange charges are to be made by member banks and, if so, what they will be. This was learned yesterday following a meeting of the auditors' section of the association at which a committee, headed by Raymond G. Marx, Riggs National Bank, reported on this subject.

Mr. Marx's committee was charged with a study of the cost to banks of handling bills of exchange, such as cashiers' checks, drafts, foreign bills, &c., with a view of submitting a schedule of proper, uniform charges for these services. While the committee has established cost per item for such service, it made no recommendation as to charges, and the section has decided to refer the report to the association as a body. The cost per item was not made public

Committee Is Appointed.

A committee has been appointed by the section for computation of assessments on member banks relative to contributions. It will be based proportionately on total resources of member banks as of given dates. J. Dann Faber, American Security & Trust Co.; Arthur J. Linn, Federal-American National Bank, and Mr. Marx will form this committee. Personnel of the committee on unprofitable accounts and business will continue to serve throughout the new administrative year.

A program committee has been appointed to arrange discussions and procure speakers. Section members will prepare papers on "Bank Examinations" to be read at the next meeting. Some of these will be published in the Auditgram, publication of the National Conference of Auditors and Comptrollers. Resolutions of respect to the memory of the late John Ewing Benton, former assistant auditor, American Security & Trust Co., will be passed by the section and copies forwarded to the family and the institution.

Income of Traction Lines.

Declines in traffic and slight increases in earnings are shown by September operations statements of the Washington Railway & Electric and Capital Traction Cos. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission. The report of Capital Traction Co., for the second full month in which higher fares have been operative show its net income to have been $30,259.63, or $1,917.38 above that of September, 1929. For the nine months, net income totals $320,390.29 or $76,509.56 under that of the period last year.

Washington Railway & Electric Co.'s net income for September, 1930, was $29,734.67, a gain of $864.46 over the month last year. For the nine months, it was $1,359,757.59, an advance of $21,932.83 from the comparative period a year ago.

Loans totaling $106,750 on old and new dwellings in Washington and suburbs were authorized at the last meeting of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. real estate committee. The loans were placed through Weaver Bros., Inc.

United Light Sold To Eaton Interest

Control of $560,000,000 Utility Is Acquired by Continental Shares.

Cleveland, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—Control of the $560,000,000 United Light & Power Co., which serves 800 communities in Ohio, Iowa, Nebraska, Indiana, Illinois, Tennessee, Missouri and Texas, has been purchased by the Continental Shares, Inc., of Cleveland, the latter company announced today.

Continental, an investment company sponsored by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, and Otis & Co., of Cleveland, acquired 394,987 shares of United class "B" common stock. This amount was said to be a part of Continental's recent $56,000,000 worth of investments. Continental now has 416,212 shares of the United class "B", or about 40 per cent of the voting stock, enough, it is said, to give it control and to place it among the important utility holding companies of the United States.

In connection with the purchases the investment company is applying to the New York Stock Exchange to list 990,000 additional shares of its common stock to be used as part payment. This will bring Continental's total outstanding shares to 3,409,665, it was announced.

Financing of the additional stock was arranged through a long-term banking loan, which, it was said, was at a favorable rate to Continental. Before the purchases Continental already had important holdings in several utility, steel, coal and rubber concerns.

Domestic Copper Price Set at 9½ Cents Pound

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—All but one producer and all of the custom smelters today were offering copper in the domestic market at 9½ cents a pound, delivered, to the end of February.

The new domestic level market a reduction of one-half a cent a pound for the producers and brought them to the level at which some custom smelters have been offering the metal for the past few days. The price is the lowest for the metal in more than 30 years, and compared with an 18-cent price a year ago. The National Electric Products Corporation has reduced the price on copper-wire products one-half a cent a pound and weatherproof wire products three-eighths of a cent a pound.

ADVICE ON INVESTMENTS

By CHARLES W. STORM.

Schulco Co.

J. G. H.—I bought $4,000 of Schulco Co., Inc., guaranteed S. F. 6½ per cent bonds, due 1946, interest payable January and July, when they were issued, 1926. Notice price of first issue is selling about 15 per cent lower than the B bonds. Am puzzled over large difference in price of these two issues. Can you give me any information?

Answer—Difference in price undoubtedly accounted for by fact that on September 19 last announced that as a result of sale of Longacre Building, New York, Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., New York, trustee, had been and was buying in guaranteed S. F. 6½ per cent, Series B, bonds of Schulco Co., Inc., to be retired under terms of indenture. Under terms of indenture, bonds not so acquired to extent of available funds must be called for redemption. They are redeemable at any time upon 30-day notice. Redemption price until October 1, 1931, was $103.

Railway Stocks and Others.

J. D. N.—Kindly advise me as to the future outlook for the following stocks: Chicago & Northwestern Railway common, Northern Pacific Railway common, Minneapolis Moline Power preferred, National Family Stores preferred.

Answer—Considered purely from a standpoint of dividends and earnings, outlook for Chicago & Northwestern common does not appear promising, as estimates of full year 1930 income are only $3.40 a common share, whereas $5 is required to pay the dividend. Prospects, on same basis, for Northern Pacific common seem a little brighter than these, as it is estimated company will earn for common this year $5.80, as against the dividend requirement of $5. Now estimated that earnings for Minneapolis Moline Power common, after taking off the $6.50 preferred dividend, will amount to $1 a share. This, together with possibility of a merger and announced good outlook for fall business, despite unsatisfactory agricultural conditions, render prospects of preferred issue at least measurably hopeful. National Family Stores reported earnings for preferred in fiscal year ended February 1, last, of $21.30 a share, comparing with $9.53 in fiscal year ended January 31, 1929. Dividends on preferred call for only $2 annually. On basis of this dividend and current selling price of the shares, the yield to the investor is fully 10 per cent. Unless some such action as that recently taken on common, on which a stock dividend was paid instead of the usual cash disbursement, is contemplated, which does not seem likely in view of wide margin profits over the dividend requirement, National Family Stores preferred looks quite attractive.

American Eagle Aircraft; Others.

Mrs. F. A. W.—Please give me some facts regarding American Eagle Aircraft stock, Radio Corporation of America and American Founders. Would you consider Radio-Keith-Orpheum a good investment?

Answer—American Eagle Aircraft, selling over-the-counter at only about 50 cents a share, is a radical speculation, and should be avoided. No cash dividends are paid, although company made a 100 per cent stock distribution in 1929.

Radio Corporation, while not as yet a dividend payer, nevertheless is looked upon as having a very promising future, and on that account possesses some attractiveness for long-term holding, in view of outstanding position of corporation in its particular industry. Notwithstanding that in first half of 1930 there was a deficit for the common of 17 cents a share, it is now estimated that for full year earnings on the stock will equal nearly $1 a share.

Because of past successful operations of American Founders Corporation, the stock appears to have considerable attraction for strictly long-pull holding. Company reported liquidating value on consolidated basis after eliminating all intercompany holdings and deferred charges, of $11.58 per share as of May 31, 1930. Radio-Keith-Orpheum, paying no dividend, is not to be classified as an investment.

Pennroad Corporation; Seaboard.

E. A. D.—Please let me know if dividend of 20 cents per share paid by Pennroad Corporation was a quarterly dividend and if the second quarter one has been declared and will be payable on December 15? Also let me know the par value of Seaboard Air Line common stock, now selling from $2.75 to $3 per share. At the present price would you consider Pennroad a good and safe investment; and while I know it is not your policy to advise as to speculation, I would like you to tell me if Seaboard common holds any possibility of a future increase in price.

Answer—Dividend paid by Pennroad was an initial one and not announced as for any stated period. Impossible to state what future action of directors may be concerning further dividends. While it would appear that company ought to be in a position to continue this dividend, nevertheless earnings of practically all railroad systems in first seven months of 1930 showed a decided decline in net. Pennroad can only be classified as a speculative-investment issue, whose outlook can only be described as "fair."

Seaboard Air Line common has no par value. Stock as a nondividend payer, is purely speculative, and this column can not depart from its fixed policy of refusing to predict possible future market movements in that or any other stock. Company's traffic at present is small, earnings are unfavorable, and there are no prospects of any immediate improvement.

Jacob Dold Packing Co.

Mrs. L. R. W.—I have 20 shares of 6½ per cent cumulative preferred stock of the Jacob Dold Packing Co. They have not paid any dividend for several years. What would you advise doing with it and what is the value at present time?

Answer—Stock currently quoted in over-the-counter market at around $11 bid, offered at $13. Company reported for fiscal year ended October 26, 1929, net income of $248,202, resulting, after preferred dividend requirements in a loss of $1.99 a common share.

This compares with net of $405,732, or $4.86 a common share, for 1928 fiscal year. Considering that no dividends have been paid on the issue since September 30, 1925, that there was an accumulation of unpaid preferred dividends on December 31, last, of 27⅝ per cent, and the earnings in last fiscal year showed such a drastic decline, the stock can only be regarded as highly speculative. As to what you should do with it, however, must be left entirely to your own decision.

Durant Motors.

J. W. L.—I have 50 shares of Durant Motor that cost me $5 a share, and now it has dropped to $1. Is there any specific reason (apart from general depression) for this low? Would you advise getting another 100 shares and averaging down?

Answer—This column never advises as to whether or not it might be advisable to average on one's stockholdings. Durant Motors is not regarded as worthy of consideration from an investment viewpoint, as no dividends are paid. There have been a number of recent developments that have attracted speculative attention to the stock, which has made it quite active. However, it is believed, the issue has been the subject of much professional manipulation.

Bullard Co. and Others.

C. S. W.—I would appreciate some information on and your opinion of Bullard Co., Pathe Exchange and American Zinc. Have been advised to invest in these, but before doing so woul like your advice.

Answer—If you were to purchase any of these stocks, you would not be investing at all, but merely speculating or gambling on the chances of their future market appreciation, as not a single one of these issues is on a dividend paying basis and consequently does not yield any income. Of the trio, Pathe Exchange probably possesses the greatest degree of attraction from a speculative angle. Company enjoyed exceptionally good earnings in 1929, operating at a profit for the first time in three years. Present outlook is quite encouraging, with company scheduled to produce 20 feature pictures and 364 short subjects in 1930.

While dividends are not being paid on any class of stock at present, the belief obtains that management will make some attempt to pay arrearages this year.

For the purpose of conserving cash, as it was stated, Bullard Co. on September 5, last, omitted the quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share due at this time. On that account, stock is without present attractiveness.

Same applies to American Zinc, chiefly because of unfavorable conditions in metal industry generally. Why not pick out some stock, preferably a preferred issue, that has a long established dividend record and which in the present weakened condition of the market may be bought at a price to return on the investment a substantial yield. There are many such issues now obtainable, as will be observed if you will follow this column closely.

New York Dock.

W. H. K.—What can you tell me about New York Dock?

Answer—Earnings for 1930 are estimated at approximately $2.50 a share. This would compare with $4.39 for 1929 and $3.73 for 1928. With the outlook for business a bit clouded, and the fact that the stock pays no dividend, New York Dock must be considered highly speculative and not suitable from the standpoint of investment.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, Oct. 24 (A.P.).—A gain of 24 per cent in net income over September of last year was shown by the Chicago Great Western Railroad for September 1930. An official statement issued today showed also the best operating ratio the road has attained since war time.

Cotton gray goods markets were quiet today, with firm prices ruling and further restriction of contract selling due to assurances of continued curtailments and further raw cotton advances. Print cloths, broadcloths and small quantities of sheetings and drills were sold. Fine goods markets were spotty with diversified inquiry. Burlap markets were again easy. Calcutta quotations for future shipment again receding slightly. There was some demand for spot overcoatings developed in wool goods markets. Spun rayon yarns were in better demand. Corded cotton yarns were sought in limited poundages. Spot raw silks were active and advancing in Japan, and dull here. Rough weave silks were of interest in spring collections.

The Inland Steel Co., of Wisconsin, will reopen its Milwaukee plant November 3, giving full time employment to 700 men. The plant will be run 24 hours in three shifts, E. G. Jones, general superintendent, said today.

Raw silk futures closed steady; sales, 1,110 bales; December 230; March 230; May 228. Open market quotations (60-day basis), Shanghai Steam extra B 290. Canton double extra A 14-16s 195. Japanese Crack double extra 270.

Corn Products Refining Co. today reported for the September quarter net profit of $3,529,081, equal to $1.22 a share on the common against $4,002,927, or $1.41 a share, in the like quarter last year.

A further increase was shown in the number of commercial failures reported this week to R. G. Dun & Co. The total was 491, compared with 460 insolvencies last week and 455 for the corresponding week last year.

E. W. Beatty, president and chairman of the board of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, said that according to present estimates the road will report an increase in net after taxes for September of more than $1,000,000, as compared with the total of $5,010,620 shown in September last year.

The W. T. Grant Co. on October 25 will open sixteen additional stores. Of this number ten are units acquired from the Howorth-Snyder Co in Port Chester, N. Y.; Malden, Allston, Dorchester, Roslindale, Watertown, Mass.; Danbury, Conn.; Woonsocket, R. I.; Somerville, N. J., and Williamsport, Pa., which had been closed awaiting their reopening under the Grant name.

Briggs Manufacturing Co. had third quarter net profit of $1,001,723, equal to 50 cents a share, against $2,771,066, or $1.38 a share, in the third quarter of 1929.

Director of the Waukesha Motor Co. announced that the policy of paying regular dividends of $3 annually would be continued and an extra dividend of $1 paid when business is under way after January 1. J. L. Horning, president, said at the annual meeting that the company has paid up all bank loans, amounting to $370,000, since August 1, and reduced contingent liabilities to $88,000.

Increasing activity and strength developed in the cotton market here toward the close of the week. Buying, which had previously been restricted by the weakness in stocks and grain, appeared to be coming into the market, while there was active covering or rebuying by recent sellers. The advance carried the new December contracts up to the 11-cent level or slightly above, or 73 points above the low price of last Saturday and 88 points above the low price touched just before the publication of the last Government crop report on October 8. No particular feature in the daily news was considered responsible for the increase in demand, which appeared to be coming from both trade and speculative sources. It was felt, however, that the comparative steadiness of cotton in the face of recent weakness in other markets had strengthened confidence in ultimate values, while the buying was doubtless encouraged by the recent improvement in reports from the textile markets.

New Regulation Snags Taxi Man

Spencer E. Coxen, a taxicab operator, was arrested yesterday by Sergt. Joseph D. Harrington, hack inspector, charged with violating the new police regulation requiring taxicabs to have painted on their sides the name of the company or individual owning them.

It was the first arrest made under the new regulation, which was adopted by the District Commissioners at the behest of the Public Utilities Commission when the latter body found it could not regulate the taxicab business as it wishes to do.

Coxen lives on Ninth street southeast near E, and was arrested when he drove A. Blaine Miles, a utility commission inspector to a point where Sergt. Harrington was waiting. Harrington said that he had warned Coxen to have the name put on his taxicab late Thursday night. It was a coincidence that Miles engaged Coxen yesterday when he saw his cab without a name.

Weding of Old and New to Take Place Tonight in Gymnasium.

RED CROSS SOUNDS CALL

BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

"The Old and New Girl Wedding," which symbolizes the spirit of union existing between the former students and new ones at Arlington Hall College for Girls, will be solmenized tonigh, at 8 oc'lock in the college gymnasium. This is an annual event, and one of the most beautiful traditions of the school. The bridegroom, pages, matron of honor and groomsmen are chosen from the former students, while the other members of the wedding arty come from the new girls. The members are chosen by a faculty committee, and only the most beautiful and most attractive girls are considered.

The personnel of the wedding party is as follows: Ruth Myers, of New York, bridegroom; Frances Carlin, of New York, best man; Genevieve Burnett, of Arkansas, matron of honor; Virginia Guyer, of West Virginia, and Elizabeth Mezick, of Maryland, pages. The groomsmen are Isabel Buchanan, of Virginia; Mary Flowe, of North Carolina; Virginia Money, of Virginia; Nancy Pope, of Virginia; Mary Klump, of Pennsylvania, and Virginia Cook, of Colorado.

Miss Christine Hughes, of Virginia, bride; Nancy Van Hovenberg, of Arkansas, maid of honor; Nettie Henderson, Alabama, and Jane Reynolds, of New York, flower girls. The maids are: Shelby Keefe, of Mississippi; Ruth Brown, of Arkansas; Frances Hornibrook, of Utah; Mary Campbell, of Ohio, Virginia Kincheloe, of Oklahoma, and Ethel Sherman, of Oklahoma.

Dr. William E. Martin, president of Arlington Hall, will give the bride away, and Eleanor Haynes, of the physical education department as the "Spirit of Arlington Hall," will pronounce the ceremony. Madame Vicarino, head of the voice department, has directed the chorus of 16 girls who will sing Lohengrins Bridal Chorus as the wedding party advances.

All costumes are of the colonial period. The bride will wear ivory satin beaded in pearls and carry old-fashioned bouquets of pinks, roses and orangeblossoms, while the groom will be attired in white satin with knee breeches, frock-tailed coat and patent leather slippers with silver buckles.

The matron of honor wears shell pink, and the maid of honor wears deep rose. All groomsmen will wear white satin knee breeches with pastel shaded velvet coats to correspond with the old-fashioned satin dresses of the maids in shades of pink, blue, lavendar and yellow.

The costumes for the flower girls are high waisted empire dresses with puff sleeves in pink and blue; they carry large baskets of rose petals to scatter before the bride. The pages also wear colonial costumes with white satin breeches and jink and blue coats. They carry medalions in the school colors, gold and blue.

Immediately following the ceremony a formal reception will be held in the gymnasium after which the first invitation dance of the year will be given.

The organization of the Red Cross roll call committee for the annual membership enrollment in Arlington County beginning November 11 continuing through November 27 is practically completed, according to the chairman, George A. Collier. Most of the vice chairmen who served last year will be in charge of the enrollment in their communities again this fall. These will be assisted by several civic associations and women's clubs.

At least 1,250 members for Arlington County is the goal of the roll call committee since there is an imperative need of funds this year for the work of both of the local chapters and national organization.

Mr. Collier stresses the need for a full enrollment of all Arlington County citizens with the local committee since 50 cents of the $1 membership enrollment in the county remains with the local Red Cross Chapter for the conduct of its work during the entire year. Those who enroll in Arlington County and obtain their membership receipt and Red Cross button are eligible to be counted as members in government departments which are seeking 100 percent membership for their officers.

According to the recordsd in the county clerk's office, the State Corporation Commission has granted a charter to the Arlington Coal Corporation, with principal offices in Clarendon.

The charter shows that the maximum capital stock shall be $50,000, with the minimum at $15,000.

Services tomorrow at 11 o'clock at St. George's Episcopal Church will be conducted by the Rev. Henry J. Miller. His subject will be "Green Eyes."

Church school will be conducted at 9:45 o'clock.

The Margaret King Circle, of St. George's Episcopal Church, will hold its monthly meeting Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Guy Rogers at Ballston.

Dr. D. M. Faulkner, of Richmond, Va., will hold his semiannual orthopedic clinic tomorrow from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. at the Clarendon Health Center. This clinic will be for those who are crippled or have bone deformities. The service will be free.

Dr. Faulkner will be assisted by Miss Pearl Griffith, of the Visiting Nurses Association of the District of Columbia; Mrs. R. N. Davies and Mrs. M. A. Rudasill, nurses in the Arlington County Health Department.

County Engineer C. L. Kinnier last night announced that the county board of supervisors will receive and open bids at 12 o'clock noon at a special meeting to be held November 7 at the courthouse for the construction of a storm sewer for Ballston. The Arlington Post, No. 139 American Legion announces that it will begin giving winter dances beginning Friday evening, November 7, in the Lyon Park Community House. These dances will be sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary Unit of the Post. Lincoln Mackey's Orchestra will furnish the music.

The congregation of the Clarendon Methodist Church on Friday night gave a reception of welcome to its new pastor and his wife, the Rev. John H. and Mrs. Pearson, who have come to Clarendon from Waynesboro, Va.

With more than 40 members of the Men's Bible class of the Clarendon Methodist Church attending, a get-together dinner was held last night in the basement of the church. A warm greeting was given to the new pastor and their honored guest, the Rev. John H. Pearson. O. L. Day, president of the class, acted as the toastmaster.

Features in The Post Tomorrow

George Cassiday, whose story of his bootleg activities on Capitol Hill is appearing daily in The Post, tomorrow will tell how he transferred his "business" from the House Office Building to the Senate Office Building. He tells how senators' drinking habits differed from those of representatives, how senators ordered their booze and how he, "the man in the green hat," actually got into politics and helped reelect a senator.

The man in the national eye for the moment is Col. Arthur Woods, former police commissioner of New York City, who has been called to Washington by President Hoover to head the Government's organization to solve the unemployment problem. A personality sketch of Col. Woods is presented tomorrow by David Rankin Barbee in his usual interesting style.

Another interesting man, a personality who will figure prominently in life in the National Capital as a result of his new position, is Gen. MacArthur, the new chief of staff of the Army. The story about him is called "The D'Artagnan of the Army" and it will be found in the tabloid magazine.

TWO ARE SENTENCED IN FAILURE OF BANK

Dayton Man and Woman Are Given 7½ Years in Embezzlement.

LOSS BELIEVED COVERED

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 24.—The first woman bank employe in Virginia ever charged with embezzlement, Miss Elizabeth Coffman, 42, assistant cashier of the defunct Bank of Dayton, Inc., at Dayton, Va., today was sentenced to seven and a half years in the State penitentiary y Judge H. W. Bertram in Rockingham County Circuit Court. She pleaded guilty.

Noah R. Crist, cashier o fthe ank, treasurer of the town of Dayton, treasurer of Shenandoah Colllege and prominent churchman, also pleaded guilty and received a similar term.

Miss Coffman was indicted for the emezzlement of "at least $15,000," while Crist was charged with a series of false entries in the discount account of the ank, aggregating $3,516.41. Auditors have not completed their work to determine xactly how much was taken.

Woman Signed Confession.

When Miss Coffman was arrested on September 20 she signed a confession that she had embezzled approximately $36,929.27, and that so far as she knew no one else was implicated. This amount was reduced when several errors in bookkeeping were discovered by auditors and when Crist's shortage was uncovered. Crist was not arrested until this week.

Miss Coffman, when asked by the court if she had anything to say, declared she had not taken as much as her confession indicated, and that she did not know exactly how much she had embezzled. She appeared indifferent to the whole procedure, while Crist remained silent and unmoved.

Shortage in the funds of the bank, which is capitalized at $25,000, was discovered by two bank examiners on September 19, when Miss Coffman made a slip in the individual account ledger sheets she had manipulated successfully over a period of years. The examiners said Miss Coffman had the most clever system they had ever seen and admitted that its detection was more or less luck.

Believe Loss Covered.

Crist had charge of the note account and the savings deposits. No shortage has been uncovered in these savings, amounting to $70,000. He made false entries almost daily as to the proceeds from interest of loans. These entries never amounted to more than $196 in any month. Crist signed a confession admitting to the false entries over the past four years. The auditors have not checked back farther.

Dayton bank officials believe the $15,000 bonds of the two employes, the property owned by them, and the bank's capital and surplus will be ample to cover the shortage so that the depositors will suffer little, if any loss. Negotiations are under way to merge the defunct institution with the nearby Planters Bank of Bridgewater in order to avoid a receivership and ita attendant delay in relasing the approximately $170,000 on deposit.

Miss Coffman started working at the bank in 1917. Crist was cashier from the time of the organization in 1906. He was one of the outstanding business men of the community, and the news that he was implicated with Miss Coffman in the shortage startled the little college town. Crist was active in church affairs, being treasurer of several funds. Shenandoah College, of which he served as treasurer for years, is operated by the Virginia Conference of the United Brethren Church and is noted for its musical training.

Halsey, of the Sixth Judicial District, has been appointed at the office of the governor to sit in the Alleghaney County Circuit Court October 27, it was announced today. Judge Halsey is to substitute for Judge Benjamin Hayden, who deemed that his presiding over the court on that day would be improper.

The case to be tried on that day will be the City of Covington against Collins and others, in a condemnation proceeding.

DATE IS SELECTED FOR VOTE ON BONDS

Town of Fairfax Will Ballot on Water System Plan November 4.

$50,000 TO BE PROVIDED

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

On November 4, at the general election, the citizens of the Town of Fairfax will again vote on a bond issue for the construction of a water system. At a special called meeting of the town council Thursday night an ordinance was passed providing for such a bond issue, not to exceed $50,000, for the installation of water mains within the corporation limits. The ordinance was signed by Judge Walter McCarthy, of the Fairfax County Circuit Court, yesterday afternoon.

For some time it has been assumed that such a bond issue election could not be held until 30 days had elapsed after the petition had been ratified by the Circuit Court. An exhaustive search was made through Virginia statutes and no law could be found which specified either how such notice should be given the taxpayers, or how long the notice should be circulated previous to the election.

The ordinance named Samuel W. Sisson, jr., Marion Earle and H. M. Gibson as judges of the election. The council directed Mayor Thomas P. Chapman to arrange with the county electoral board immediately to have the necessary ballots printed. The ordinance authorizes that $50,000 in bonds may be issued, but councilmen said that the exact amount to be issued can not be definitely determined until bids are received. It is hoped that not more than $35,000 will be needed to complete the project.

Joint Committee Meets.

The joint committee of councilmen and citizens, of which A. R. Sherwood, H. N. Clark and O. B. Campbell, of the council, and Wilson M. Farr, Dr. F. W. Huddleston, John Whalen and B. S. Gillispie are members, met with Mayor Thomas P. Chapman and Fairfax County Engineer F. Novell Larkin, and considered the proposed plans and the description of the mains which were included in the ordinance. The members of this committee differ in their opinion as to whether the town must ask for competitive bids or can authorize the county engineer to proceed with the project on a force account. It was stated that if the county engineer is employed, the county will be repaid for the time he spends on the project.

If the citizens of the town approve the bond issue a detailed survey will be made and the plans submitted to one of the best municipal engineers available. County Engineer Larkin is now drawing up an approximate estimate of the cost of constructing a municipal water system. Several mains have been added to the plans made last year in order that the residents of the town may have water service immediately. Fire plugs will be placed at frequent intervals for use of the fire departments. The proposed system will include several wells, pumps and pump houses, a water tower, and adequate reservoirs.

Principal Due in 30 Years.

According to the ordinance, the bonds will bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent, payable semiannually. The principal will be due on or before 30 years from the date of issue. The payment of the principal sum and the interest on the bonds will be guaranteed by a special tax levy on the property in the town not to exceed 80 cents on the $100 valuation. As it is contemplated the town will derive a revenue from the water system the maximum tax will be reduced from year to year.

It is firmly believed by the leaders of the movement that because of the present continued drought very little difficulty will be encountered in passing the bond issue, as practically all the wells in town are dry or so contaminated that they are unfit for drinking purposes.

The ordinance lists sixteen water mains, which are aimed to supply the entire corporation: No. 1 main extends along the Little River pike or Main street from the western to the eastern boundary of the town. No. 2 main extends along the Fairfax Station-Chain Bridge road, or Payne street from the southern to the northern corporation line. No. 3 main, along Cedar avenue from Payne street to the Fairfax Fair Grounds. No. 4, along the Lee Highway from the Little River pike at Campbell's corner to the northern corporation line.

Line of No. 5 Main.

No. 5 main, from the intersection of Main and East streets, south along east to the intersection with Sager avenue and Court street or Sager avenue extended. No. 6, beginning at T. J. Thompson's on Sager avenue to the intersection of Sager avenue with East or Court street, thence west on Court to the intersection with Payne street. No. 7 main, from the intersection of Mechanic street and the Little River pike along Mechanic to South street, thence on South to its intersection with East street. No. 8 main begins at the intersection of Payne and South streets, west along South to the property of H. R. Cupp

No. 9 main starts at the intersection of Payne and Jones streets, west on Jones street to a point opposite the property of Frank Jones. No. 10, from the intersection of Payne street and the street running west along the line of Ashby Graham's property, thence west along that street to a point opposite the property of Frank Marshall. No. 11, beginning at a point on Payne street near Frank Marshall's store, thence east along the street which intersects Payne street at the corner to a point opposite the property of Jack Naylor. No 12, a main beginning at the intersection of Cedar avenue and McLean avenue, north along McLean avenue to a point opposite the property of Elmer Sutphin. No. 13, a main extending west along Warwick avenue from the intersection with Payne street to a point opposite the property of William Sutphin.

No. 14, south along railroad avenue from the intersection with Warwick avenue to a point opposite the property of James Adams. No. 15, east on North street from the intersection of Payne street to the intersection with the Lee Highway. No. 16, south on School street from the intersection with the Little River pike to its intersection with Sager avenue.

Harry Barlane, 20, of New York, and John Kress, 19, of Norfolk, Va., are being held in the Fairfax County Jail on a charge of entering the store of Benjamin Wease, near Accotink, and stealing a ham, candy, cigarettes and several loaves of bread. The men were arrested by Deputy Sheriff F. P. McCann, of Accotink, after a chase along the Washington-Richmond highway. It is alleged that they confessed to breaking and entering the store and taking the articles. They state that they were hitch-hiking their way South to find work and having no money they resorted to this means of getting food. Justice of the Peace Arthur D. Kirby, at Groveton, ordered them held for the action of the grand jury at the November term of court.

The Arlington County Branch of the Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church at Falls Church will hold a food sale in the old drug store building at East Falls Church today Mrs. William T. Van Doren will be in charge of the sale, assisted by other members of the society.

The members of the Laurel Rebekah Lodge, No. 44, at Falls Church, will attend in a body the meeting of the Northern Virginia Odd Fellows Association which is to be held today in the Odd Fellows Temple in Washington.

Mrs. C. N. McGoarty, regent, and Mrs. John F. Bethune were elected as delegates from the Falls Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, to the State convention of the order, which is to be held next month in Lynchburg, Va. Mrs. Harry M. Fellows and Mrs. Pearce Horne were elected as alternates.

THE ONCE OVER

WALL STREET REGRETS.

I went to the market
To buy A. M. Byers:
The fellows who tipped me

I phoned to a broker
To buy J. I. Case,
And now I am groaning
All over the place.

I went in a huddle
And bought Chesapeake—
And when I recall it
I grow very weak.

I switched to the coppers
And bought Kennecott;
And now it appears I
Was put on the spot.

"Buy Gen'ral Electric,"
A friend of mine said;
I got it at sixty—
Oh, is my face red?

"The food stocks won't suffer,"
Another guy wrote;
I bought Standard Brands and
Went down with the boat.

"The movies are bargains,"
I heard a man say;
I bought me some Warners
And now I am gray.

"The chain stores for profits,"
A friend told the wife;
I bought for the pull and
I'll have 'em for life.

"The motors are cheap," so
An expert decreed;
But since I bought mine they
Are cheaper indeed.

"Go pick up some railroads,"
A broker friend cried:
I bought New York Central—
And went for a ride.

"Buy 'Can;' it's a leader,"
I heard in the crash;
I got some, but now it's Prefixed by an "ash."

Oh, oils, steels and motors!

7,000 WITNESS END OF FREDERICK FAIR

Closing Day Is Featured by Students, Cattle and Corn-Judging Tests.

MONEY PRIZES AWARDED

Special to The Washington Post.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 24.—From 6,000 to 7,000 persons witnessed the close of the Frederick Fair today. The weather was cold and overcoats and heavy wraps proved comfortable. Buildings containing the exhibits were well patronized. It was the last of the fairs of the Eastern Circuit, including the States of New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania and Maryland. Persons who attended the 11 fairs of the circuit stated that the crowds this year were smaller than usual owing to the business depression.

The feature today was the vocational high school students cattle and corn judging contest under the supervision of Dr. Devoe Meade and Dr. J. W. Meyzer, of the extension service, University of Maryland, and Henry R. Shoemaker, county agent. About 100 boys, representing about 50 high schools from 17 counties, arrived last night and attended the annual meeting and banquet of the Future Farmers of America Association. Emory L. Coblentz was the principal speaker and a number of guests including officials of agricultural schools of their States and principals of high schools were introduced. New officers elected were Woodrow Wills, Thurmont, president; Palmer Hopkins, Highland, vice president; Henry Butler, Centreville, secretary and Robert Stine, Boonsboro, treasurer. Individual cash prizes and silver cups will be awarded the winners.

The final demonstrations by the Federation of Rural Women's Clubs were given today in the household building. Those in charge were Mrs Harry Boyle and Mrs. Ward Kerrigan Emmittsburg Club; Mrs. D. Edgar Bittle, Mrs. Howard Metzger, Myersville Club; Miss Genevieve Thomas and Mrs. C. O. Gochnaugher, Adamstown Club; Mrs. O. B. Stone and Miss Myrtle Carter, Liberty Club; Miss Marie Dixon and Mrs. George Strasburger, Jugbridge Club; Miss Ethel Thomas and Mrs. Nevin Dutrow, Harmony Grove Club; Miss Charlotte Quinn and Miss Nellie Witter, 4-H Club girls. Vegetable cookery, cake, school lunches and cottage cheese were demonstrated from a platform made to resemble a kitchen.

The judges concluded awarding about $10,000 in prizes. Competition was unusually keen in the large cattle department. Frank M. Stevens, a Frederick County farmer, made a clean sweep in the Dutch belt cattle class, and C. M. Brennan and Patterson Bros. captured all the money in the short horn class. Home breeders took most of the prizes in the Holstein and Jersey classes. On account of the large number of entries extra provision was made for about 50 cattle under a tent. A number of the concessionaries and sideshows were packed tonight to leave for the South tomorrow.

DIVORCE IS GRANTED BOOK DEALER'S WIFE

Mrs. Severe Given Custody of Three Children and Monthly Alimony.

INFIDELITY IS ALLEGED

Absolute divorce from Howard Everette Severe, Washington book dealer, was granted Mrs. Juanita McElroy Severe, of Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday by Judge Robert B. Peter, sr., in circuit court at Rockville, Md.

The divorce was granted on grounds of infidenity. The wife was awarded custody of the three children and alimony of $275 a month. Attorney Kenneth Lyddane, of Rockville, represented the wife.

In an opinion handed down at the same time he granted the absolute decree of divorce, Judge Peter said that the actual acts of infidelity had not been proven, but that the court was forced to recognize that the opportunity was afforded when the defendant and the corespondent, whose name was not given, parked in an automobile in a private entrance in Virginia. He said that he was reluctant to grant the divorce, inasmuch as he was convinced that the wife is "a very sick woman, in a highly nervous condition," and that she will require medical attention and loving care.

The husband declared that his wife had been cross and that she nagged him to excess and was subject to fits of temper which she vented on him, the children, and her mother. He charged that by her actions she killed his love for her and drove him to the companionship of other women. He did not deny having been out on automobile trips with several women.

BOARD ANNOUNCES VALUATION FIGURES

907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The assessed valuation of all real property in Alexandria, exclusive of public utilities, as determined by the board of assessors, which has just completed its work, is $36,000,000, or an increase of approximately $20,000,000 over the present valuation. The increase is due to the fact that the board has placed what is considered to be the actual valuation on the property, instead of an arbitrary valuation for taxation purposes as has been done heretofore, and a new rate of taxation will, it is understood, be adopted by the city council, so that the amount of taxes to be paid by the property owners will be only slightly in excess of that heretofore paid. The valuation of the public utilities, such as railroads, trolley lines, water works, gas works, railroad yards, electric plants, &c., is estimated at $5,000,000, or an aggregate valuation of $41,000,000.

It is expected that the books of the assessors will be formally turned over to the proper city officials today, and within a short time they will be open for public inspection in the offices of the clerk of the corporation court. Within the next two weeks it is expected that the local board of review will begin to hold meetings to hear complaints from individual property owners against their assessments, the sessions of this board being held in the city council chamber in the city hall. Dates for these meetings are to be announced later.

Various rates have been suggested as a basis for taxation, but it is now generally understood that the city council will place the rate at $1.10 per $100 of assessed valuation. The old rate was $2.65 per $100, the assessments in most cases amounting to approximately one-third the actual value of the property, whereas the new assessment will represent the total value.

The board of assessors is composed of Taylor Burke, Fred C. Goodnow and Edward J. Fleming, and in connection with their work blueprints giving a description of each piece of property in the city were made by the Manufacturers Appraisal Co., of Philadelphia, and also a card index system has been established which will be placed in the office of the commissioner of revenue. This will greatly simplify the work of future boards of assessors.

The new assessment in the newly annexed territory was also increased, although it is understood that the amount of taxes to be paid by property owners in that section, according to the annexation decree, can not be increasod within five years from January 1, 1930.

The Alexandria Gas Co., which recently purchased from the City of Alexandria the municipal gas plant, will shortly furnish gas from the Washington plant and will abandon the present city gas plant. The work of laying mains from Georgetown to Alexandria is now under way and will be completed by December 15. The gas will come from the plant at Virginit avenue and Twenty-fifth street, the pipes passing under the Key Bridge to Clarendon, thence to Virginia Highlands and thence along Mount Vernon avenue to the plant of the company in the northeastern section of Alexandria. Six-inch mains are now being laid and now extend as far as Four Mile Run. By November 20 it is expected gas will be piped into the big holder at the local gas plant.

The present gas plant, according to officials of the new company, is obsolete, and will be abandoned as soon as the new aranrgements are completed.

Navy Day will be lobserved at the Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station Monday, when the plant will be open to the public from 8:30 a. m. until 4:30 p. m., for inspection of the plant and the various types of torpedoes which were manufactured at the plant while it was in operation.

Some of the first torpedoes used by the United States Navy will be on exhibition, as well as the latest models, and various types used by the Germans in the World War. Guides will be provided to explain the models to visitors.

Troop No. 134, Boy Scouts, will take a hike to the nearby countryside on Friday of this week. A court of honor will also be held that evening.

Alen Montague, Negro, charged with felonious assault on John Knight, colored, was picked up in Washington and brought here by Detective Sergt. Edgar Sims. Montague, in police court yesterday, was sentenced to six months in jail.

Mrs. Ida Cunningham Crilly, wife of J. H. Crilly, died yesterday evening at her home, 607 Cameron street. She was a daughter of the late Capt. Philip Cunningham and Mrs. Sue Van Possen Cunningham, of Martinsburg, W. Va.

Man Dead, Wife And Son Are Shot

Richmond, Va., Oct. 24 (A.P.).—P. H. Garber, 33, was found dead and his wife and 7-year-old son seriously wounded by police officers called to the Garber home on Williamsburg road today. Investigators expressed the opinion that Garber shot his wife and child and then committed suicide.

There were no witnesses to the shotting, but Miss Nettie Ryland, a guest in the house, heard the shots and called aid. Detective Sergeants Inman and Walton quoted her as saying that Mrs. Garber noticed that her husband was acting strangely yesterday. Garber was suffering from an infection of the legs contracted during the World War.

Garber's body, fully clothed, was found on an upper floor. Mrs. Garber, attired in house clothes, was found wounded on the lower floor and was taken to a hospital in a critical condition. The little boy was in bed suffering from a bullet wound in the shoulder.
